Only 10 Days' Gas Supply Left in East; Quotas Cut

Standard Allots Retailers Only 30% Of July Totals; D. C. Dealers Meet Tonight

Warning that an acute shortage of petroleum not merely threatens in the East but is already here, Acting Petroleum Coordinator Ralph K. Davies announced yesterday that gasoline on hand was enough for only ten days.

However, by the same token, the supply on hand the same time last year was enough for less than 11 days.

Davies, assistant petroleum coordinator who is taking Harold Ickes' place while the coordinator is out of town, disclosed that 20,476,000 barrels of gasoline were on hand last week in the East. On hand the same time last year, he reported, were 22,214,000 barrels.

Locally, filling station operators were jarred by the disclosure that Standard Oil will deliver to its dealers, between August 16 and 31, only 30 per cent of the amount they bought in July. The curb applies to independent and company-owned stations alike.

Must Watch Sales

For example, if a dealer purchased 100,000 gallons from Standard Oil in July, he will get no more than 30,000 gallons during the last two weeks of this month. Since there has been no systematic rationing the last five days, that means the individual dealers will have to watch their sales extra carefully during the next ten.

Otherwise, more than one may find his quota exhausted on the twenty-fifth or twenty-sixth, in which case he might as well close up shop for the remainder of the month.

Dealers had been expected to be put on 45 per cent of the July consumption, instead of 30 per cent.

No statements were forthcoming from the American and Texas companies and other gasoline distributors as to their rationing plans, but retailers believe they will take action comparable with Standard Oil's.

Cabs to Reduce Cruising

Meantime Harry R. Wainwright, executive of the Retail Gasoline Dealers Corporation, broadcast a call for a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the new Interior Building auditorium to discuss quotas and rationing. The group is an organization of independent filling station operators.

Maj. Beverly C. Snow, chairman of the District Petroleum Conservation Committee, and Wainwright will address the meeting.

On still another front of the gasoline conservation drive, heads of taxicab companies yesterday pledged their sympathy with the call to

U. S. Navy Clearing Ocean of U-Boats, Reporters Find

The United States Navy's Atlantic patrol is "slowly but surely" clearing Western Hemisphere waters of German submarines and surface raiders, reporters who have just returned from a trip with the patrol, reported here yesterday.

Battle-strength crews man the guns of every ship day and night.

Blackout conditions obtain nightly, and there is no inter-ship communication by radio or blinker light.

While no German submarines were sighted on the trip, several were heard. The sighting of the floating body of a man, part of a cargo, and debris, testified that a ship had been sunk on the patrol route recently. Planes maintain a daily patrol sometimes as far as 300 miles ahead.

We Out-Produce the World—In Glittering Luxury Gadgets

"IF we get the spirit, I don't see anybody on God's earth that can out-produce the United States of America."

These were the words, yesterday, of William S. Knudsen, director general of the OPM. He referred to the production of weapons for defense.

The last 14 months prove Knudsen partially correct. We have outproduced the world—but not in armaments. Instead, we have turned out more glittering luxury gadgets than this comfort-mad Nation has ever seen.

America needs guns. In answer, it has been given automobiles—beautiful things and 20 per cent more than any year since 1929.

America needs planes. In answer, an industrial cornucopia has poured out a deluge of washing machines, vacuum cleaners, air conditioning equipment, electric refrigerators and radios.

If these handsome objects are not quite like guns and planes, they at least have used up the same raw materials.

America needs munitions and ships. In answer, it has a spending boom with an appetite for copper, steel, zinc and brass every whit as rapacious as the defense industry.

TO get the guns and planes and munitions, America needed military planners to prepare the buying list; industrial experts to mobilize the world's greatest, most modern, most efficient factory; a central economic body to secure raw materials, machines, labor, management.

Each Blames the Other

Instead, America got military planners who started to prepare in terms of a cavalry skirmish on the Mexican border; industrial experts who were looking out the window on the job of getting supplies and complacently watching industry mobilize itself for civilian production, not guns; a military and economic high command which consistently shot behind a moving target, failing to sketch the job to be done, failing to delegate the authority to do it.

In this picture, the White House, the Army and the Office of Production Management (along with its predecessor, the National Defense Advisory Commission) have been like a bad outfield.

The ball was a high fly.

Each fielder screamed, "Yours!"

The ball fell between them.

Ever since, each has been blaming the other.

THE Army declares it was never told what sort of a war to prepare for, whether to defend the United States, to defend the Western Hemisphere, or to lick Hitler.

The OPM declares it never had authority to challenge the puny Army estimates of materials needed, or to step up the dribbling, piecemeal pace of appropriation requests; that it had equally little authority to force the Army to place its contracts with an eye for future needs.

The rest of the Administration, voicing private White House sentiment, declares that anyone with eyes in his head could see the huge extent of the job; that there was no mistaking the task of OPM; that OPM could have had all the authority it wanted had it ever asked for it.

THE result:

Confidential figures, which cannot be disclosed in detail, show, in general, that not only has production to date been woefully inadequate, but that one year from now—two years after the defense program was launched—production of military planes, artillery and tanks will be less than one-half of the amount required for adequate defense and real aid to Britain.

We'll Be Lagging Next Year

Today, 14 months after the program began, the great reservoir of military production facilities—the durable goods industries, the pride of American civilization—has scarcely been tapped. Its wheels are turning busily, busier than at any time since 1929, but not sufficiently on guns, planes or tanks.

AS of the first of June, this year, the size of the defense program, as measured in appropriations, was almost 50 billion dollars.

Yet of this amount, only 28 billions, or less than 58 per cent, had been placed under contract by that date. The supplies for which the remaining 22 billions are to be spent had not even been ordered.

On top of this, another 30 billion dollars will soon be appropriated for defense purposes.

Of airplane appropriations of $11,728,000,000, contracts have been issued for only $6,829,000,000.

Of appropriations for ordnance and combat vehicles, totaling $8,225,000,000, not quite five billions have been contracted for.

Of $5,880,000,000 appropriations for new industrial facilities, which themselves take one or two years to build before they can produce the items for a shooting war, contracts have been issued for less than half the amount.

THE figures above refer only to contracts—contracts for deliveries expected some time in the future. Actual deliveries are military secrets and may not be printed.

This is just as well. They do not make happy reading.

With military production a full year away from the date of peak rate of output, there are already crucial shortages in raw materials. There is barely enough nickel and aluminum for military needs, and none at all for the rest of American industry.

Crucial Shortages Already

There is a deficiency in magnesium which utterly precludes the production of certain armament items in the amount desired. The greatest difficulty is being experienced in getting steel plate for ships—naval and merchant marine—and for railroad freight cars, which are necessary if another inevitable shortage, that of transportation, is to be alleviated, much less averted.

AND if—as is by no means improbable—commerce ends with the Orient and East Indies, the situation in tin, rubber, manganese, chromite, tungsten, manila fiber and mica, to name only a few of the items of which inadequate stockpiles have been accumulated, will be equally serious.

What is the answer?

The answer is that there are a thousand answers. It simply depends on with whom you talk. There are a thousand suave, passionately earnest good answers. But, paradoxically, most of them are bad.

The truth seems to be that our ball club needs a Jimmy Dykes—a tough, battling, two-fisted guy from across the tracks who will be thrown out of the game now and then for protesting too strenuously, but who, in the game of getting guns for soldiers, will win—come hell or high water.

Smaller War Office Studied For Arlington

Army Weighs 2d Site In County; President Orders Planners To Scale Down Size

A compromise Arlington County site for the War Department's "dream building" is under official consideration, it was learned last night, after President Roosevelt ordered the Army to redraft its plans for the structure, both as to location and size.

A smaller building than the 35-million-dollar one indorsed by Congress and condemned Tuesday by the President may be located on the south side of the old Experimental Farm on a tract known as the Quartermaster Depot site.

This 85-acre site, originally acquired for an Army supply center, is north of Columbia Pike and is approached from the District by the Fourteenth Street Highway Bridge.

Sees Construction Chief

Mr. Roosevelt yesterday told the War Department to put its planners on a three-shift basis if necessary to work out new plans for the vitally needed new Army office building.

He held a 40-minute conference with Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy and Brig. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, Army construction chief.

McCloy told reporters that the President instructed them to report back to him as soon as they can perfect new plans.

"I can't say the Arlington site is definitely out," said McCloy, "but the President told us to revamp the whole thing."

Opposed Projected Site

Mr. Roosevelt declared at a press conference Tuesday that the proposed Arlington building approved by Congress was too large and would mar the view of National Cemetery and the Lee Mansion.

The President said he would not approve the huge project, even though it is part of a seven billion dollar Army supply bill. He said he had been responsible for desecrating Washington's parks during the World War by causing construction of temporary buildings on Constitution Avenue and did not want to hurt his chances of going to heaven by repeating the same mistake.

"Mess," Says Taft

Officials expected that the President, in signing the big Army appropriation bill, would ask Congress to change the plans for the War Department offices, threatening never to build the structure if they insist on locating it on the Arlington tract, which is just across the Memorial Bridge.

Congressional quarters meanwhile condemned the Memorial Bridge site.

Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican), of Ohio, said of the Congress-

It's Some Army—So John Brings Home the Meat

By the United Press

With the Second Army in Arkansas, Aug. 20.—During the course of today's combat maneuvers a radio "jeep" car pulled up in front of an Arkansas farmhouse and the farmer's wife came out to look it over.

"Can you talk anywhere with those things," she asked.

Getting an affirmative reply she said: "Well please call up my husband, John Walker, in town and tell him to bring home two extra pounds of meat because Aunt Carrie is coming to supper."

The sergeant in charge promptly got in communication with another radio "jeep" in town and asked its crew to get Walker. They did and led the utterly bewildered man to the car from which he talked with his wife and got her personal instructions to get the meat.

"It's some Army," he muttered as he moved off to the butcher shop.

Vichy Accused Unjustly, Hull Told by Envoy

Gaston Henri-Haye, the French Ambassador, complained to Secretary of State Hull yesterday that the Vichy government has been unjustly accused of planning to surrender the fleet and Atlantic naval bases to Germany.

After a call on Hull, the envoy insisted to newsmen that there was nothing in a speech last week by Marshal Petain, French chief of state, to justify an assumption that the French would give Germany military concessions.

Help for the Soviets

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The United States is willing to make a war loan to Russia.

Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, said yesterday that he is ready to grant an RFC loan to the Soviets if their cash runs out, and he expects it to be exhausted—"obviously"—if they seek a very large amount of supplies in the United States.

A straight loan, rather than the lend-lease help that is enjoyed by Great Britain, would be the means of aiding Russia, Jones told a press conference.

He did not mention the amount of the prospective loan to the Soviets, but he stated that he "could not imagine" it would be as much as one billion dollars, the figure that has been recently mentioned, "unless you are going to project it into a good, long war."

Russia's Credit Good

Jones considered Russia a good credit risk, for he pointed out that the Soviet Union does not have a large internal or external debt and has met its international obligations from the start.

Asked what collateral the United States would demand, he replied:

"Just a promissory note, I guess."

"If the Administration policy is to aid Russia and she is unable to pay cash," said the loan agency head and Secretary of Commerce, "I think we (one of his lending agencies) can find some way to help."

Administration officials until yesterday have maintained that Russia had sufficient cash to pay for her needs here, but President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill appear to have agreed on a much larger program of aid to Russia than was originally contemplated.

Soviet Cash Here Exhausted

When the German attack began, Russia had about $40,000,000 cash here which is now, reportedly exhausted. In addition, Russia is believed to have sizeable amounts of foreign exchange and gold in Russia and an annual gold production of 150 to 200 million dollars.

Jones indicated that Russia's difficulty was in finding the foreign exchange needed to make payments here. A dollar loan from RFC would remedy that.

Opposition Feared

The Cabinet member did not explain why an outright loan was decided upon, rather than lend-lease aid, but it is known that the Administration fears that lend-lease help to Russia would arouse oppposition in Congress to the large new request for lend-lease funds which is now being prepared.

Russian needs are to be discussed at a conference, soon in Moscow, where the United States and Great Britain will reportedly be represented by Harry L. Hopkins, the President's aide, and Lord Beaverbrook, British supply minister.

Senate Rushes Tax Bill to Cut Loss of Excises

Hearings Will End Saturday; Measure Going to Floor Sept. 2

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A speed-up in Senate consideration of the $3,200,000,000 House tax bill to put taxpayers on notice of amounts they must save for increased tax payments and to reduce the revenue losses from excise delays was ordered last night.

Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee said hearings on the defense financing measure will end Saturday and that the revamped bill, barring unforeseen delays, will be laid before the Senate on September 2.

The committee next week in executive session is expected to follow the general outlines of the House measure except for addition of base-broadening provisions designed to raise from 305 million to 348 million dollars more revenue.

Instead of drastically increasing the House total to meet mounting defense expenditures, a majority of the committee apparently favors a bill in the neighborhood of $3,500,000,000 the minimum Treasury goal. A second "administrative" tax bill is expected to follow this winter.

Minor Changes Expected

Chairman George, in urging the earliest possible Senate action, pointed out last night that higher individual income tax rates to be imposed retroactively for the year make it urgent in fairness that the taxpayers know soon how much they must set aside for March 15 payments.

He also called attention to the Treasury calculations that every day's delay costs the Government about three million dollars in needed revenue from the new excises.

An obstacle to a speedy report may develop from strong support within the committee for imposition of a general manufacturers' excise tax to boost revenue sharply and supplant the present selective system of excises.

These proposals, not included by the House and opposed by the Ad-

Kearny Strike Peace Put Up To President

Talks Fail, Green Tosses Problem Back to Roosevelt

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Solution of the two-weeks old Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. strike was thrown back to the White House last night when John Green, head of the striking C. I. O. shipbuilding workers at Kearny, N. J., dispatched a memorandum to President Roosevelt calling for his "good offices" to effect a settlement.

Green's message followed the failure of a two-hour session of direct negotiations with company president L. H. Korndorff which Mr. Roosevelt had requested in messages to the two principals on Tuesday.

Pressure Rumored

The difficult dispute, the most serious strike on the defense front, appeared yesterday as even more confused, particularly because of the wording of the Chief Executive's letters to Green and Korndorff, asking the 17,000 strikers to "return to your work at once," but without taking cognizance of a previous National Defense Mediation Board recommendation that the union be granted its sole strike demand, a

U. S. Troops Alert After Nazi Plane Scouts Iceland

By International News Service

Reykjavik, Aug. 20.—American and British guardians of Iceland were on the alert tonight after a twin-engined German bomber, swooping low over Reykjavik, was chased away from the island by British pilots flying American-made Curtiss Tomahawks and other fighters.

An air-raid alarm, lasting three-quarters of an hour, sent British and American defense units to their stations in and around the Icelandic capital as the Nazi bomber, apparently on a reconnoitering mission, climbed and ducked into a low-lying cloudbank, escaping the pursuing fighters.

[An Associated Press dispatch said antiaircraft batteries fired several rounds at the bomber.]

The German plane, which appeared over Reykjavik at 7 a. m., did not drop any bombs.

It was the first time since American marines and sailors landed in Iceland early in July that they had a glimpse of a German bomber.

Roosevelt Going To Estate Today

The White House announced yesterday that President Roosevelt would leave late today for a weekend at Hyde Park, N. Y., where he will be host to the Duke of Kent, brother of King George of England, who has been touring Canada.

The duke will return to Washington with the President Monday where he will be a guest at the White House and then set out on a tour of inspection of Norfolk and Baltimore defense plants.

Two Russian Air Brigades Made Captive, Germans Say

By the Associated Press

Reports which the Associated Press has been unable to confirm circulated last night in a number of European capitals that Russian troops had blown up the huge hydroelectric power dam on the Dnieper River near Dnieperopetrovsk in an effort to slow the German advance into the Ukraine.

The New York Times in a Bern dispatch said an unconfirmed report originating in Bucharest, Rumania, told how millions of tons of swirling waters broke through the dynamited barrier to flood the lowlands on the lower elbow of the river.

In London the Daily Mail quoted what was purported to be Premier Josef Stalin's exact order to Marshal Semeon Budyenny, commander of the Red army troops on the southern front.

Built With U. S. Aid

Stalin, according to this version, called Marshal Budyenny and asked him if he had managed to get as many of his retreating troops across the Dnieper River as possible.

"Yes," Budyenny said. "Nearly half a million."

"Good then blow up the dam." Stalin was supposed to have said.

The Stockholm dispatch then related how Russian sappers dynamited the dam which took four years to build with American technical aid and once was reputed to be the largest in the world.

[According to the United Press the Daily Mail said it was believed the flood waters had engulfed thousands of German troops, fleeing Russian peasants and straggling Red soldiers.

"Suicidal," Axis Diplomat Says

["From now on the Soviet war effort will have to depend largely upon new industries established in the Ural Mountains," the Daily Mail said.

[The New York Times dispatch from Bern, quoted an Axis diplomat as saying:

["This suicidal scorpion sting will release thousands of Russian troops for occupation elsewhere since the unstemmed flood of the Dnieper's waters in its lower regions would render relatively stable terrain useless for generations to come."]

Meanwhile, Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, commander of the northern Soviet armies, appealed to all Russians in the Leningrad area to fight to the last in defense of that second largest Soviet city—an admission of the dangerous nearness of German troops.

"The enemy is attempting to penetrate into Leningrad," the marshal said . . . "The enemy will never set foot in our beautiful city." He announced that a new national militia was being formed to stop the German drive.

Tanks Dropped by Plane

German troops were acknowledged to be 75 miles southwest of the big industrial Baltic city. Red troops abandoned Kingisepp near the Estonian border several days ago after German troops drove around both sides of Lake Peipus.

Nazi soldiers also are fighting the defending Russians at Novgorod, 100 miles south of Leningrad, and at Staraya Russa, about 150 miles southeast of Leningrad.

Finnish and German troops are closing in from the north and last were reported about 75 miles away.

Earlier the Russians claimed a Red counteroffensive along the central front, in which airplanes dropped tanks manned by infantrymen, already had driven the Germans out of three successive defense lines.

'Reds Can Hold Out'

Hopkins' Data Assured Parley Of Strength of Soviet Forces

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 20.—Official optimism in Washington and London over Russia's chance in the struggle with Germany is based on three assurances given to President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill by Harry Hopkins during their Atlantic conference, it was reported reliably tonight.

The assurances which emerged from Hopkins' conference with Joseph Stalin and the lease-lend administrator's personal observations on his recent visit to Russia were these:

1. Nazi efforts to raise a Fifth Column within Russia have failed;

2. Despite the terrific blows of the German armies, Moscow has been able to maintain unbroken communications between general headquarters and the three field army groups;

3. Soviet industrial expansion in the past five years has been on such a scale that even if the Germans hold the western Ukraine the Russians will be able—with some American and British help for immediate needs—to equip new armies and organize new air formations for the duration of a long war.

Explaining failure of a German Fifth Column in Russia, an informant declared, "Stalin had welded the army and people to-

Soviets' Planes Drop Tanks Behind Nazi Lines

Air-Borne Infantry Has Seized 5 Towns, Moscow Asserts

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), Aug. 21.—The Russians reported today that air-borne tanks laden with Red army infantry landed deep within the German lines and dealt a slashing blow in a continuing series of counterattacks, while a similar Nazi stratagem was crushed by Soviet "exterminator" squads.

[A United Press dispatch from London said Marshal Budyenny, acting under personal orders of Josef Stalin, was reported to have blown up the huge Dneiper River dam near Zaporozhe to cover the Russian retreat in the Ukraine, leaving a 275-mile stretch of the river a raging torrent.]

Appeal to Leningrad

At the same time, Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, northern Red army commander, acknowledged the gravity of the German drive on Leningrad by appealing to everyone in that province to fight to the death.

Announcing formation of new national militia bodies to protect the big industrial Baltic city, he declared everyone "must immediately start learning their new duties—how to use a rifle or machine gun, and how to prepare for the defense of the city."

"Destroy the dastardly enemy who is filled with hatred of our country, of our people," he said. "Let nothing stop you, neither bombing nor other difficulties. Prepare for yet more abominable measures by the Hitlerite bandits."

Five Towns Recaptured

Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, said the Russian counterattacks on the central front already had broken three German defense lines and recaptured five population centers, the flying tank troopers and foot soldiers sailing down to decide the issue at the third German line.

The Soviet information bureau, ignoring this account, said the Germans landed large parachute forces and three tankettes behind the Russian lines at an undisclosed place, but that the whole party was smashed.

The navy paper, Red Fleet, said also that the Hango base dominating the entrance to the Baltic Sea was staving off preeated German-Finnish attacks and had made counter-raids capturing islands surrounding that southwestern tip of Finland.

In the central land area, not otherwise identified, the forces of Gen. Konevy have been advancing for three days, Red Star said.

Titanic Assault

First the Russians threw tanks, planes, artillery and infantry into a titanic assault which drove the Germans out of front lines and routed them a second time when they tried to entrench farther west, it said.

Then the Russians pushed across a river and challenged the Germans' third line atop a hill.

At this juncture, the Red air force dropped tanks deep behind the Nazi defenses, infantrymen leaped from the tanks, and this combination of men and machine decided the issue of the moment, the Red Star account continued.

(Size of the tanks was not mentioned. The Russians practiced airborne tank invasion in July, 1940, in taking over Bessarabia and the northern Bucovina from Rumania.)

Red Star quoted captured Germans as complaining that for three days the Russian artillery barrage was so intense they dared not even peep out of their entrenchments.

5 Villages Won Back

The official Soviet news agency, Tass, carried an account of a similar action in which five Russian villages were wrested from the Germans, and military dispatches told of retaking a point identified only as "P" on the central front.

The official afternoon war bulletin told of a violent battle in a new theater along the lower central front—about Gomel midway between Smolensk and Kiev, the Ukrainian capital.

Russians Smashed In Counterattack, Germans Announce

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 20—A crushing defeat of the Russians around Gomel on the central front with destruction or capture of parts of 25 Red army divisions and two brigades of air-borne troops, running to a total of 78,000 prisoners, was reported late tonight in a special communique from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters.

While earlier accounts from the front pictured the Red army as near catastrophe in a bitter battle in the Ukraine for the bridgeheads of the lower Dnieper, the spotlight suddenly was shifted to the previously-ignored central sector with this brief announcement:

"In the area around and north of Gomel, a battle has taken place which ended in a crushing defeat for the Soviet army.

"Part of seventeen infantry divisions, one motorized, two tank and five cavalry divisions as well as two brigades of troops landed from the air were defeated, destroyed or taken prisoner.

"Seventy-eight thousand prisoners, 144 tanks, 700 guns and two armored trains fell into our hands."

Counterattack Indicated

(Mention of air-borne troops left little doubt that this was a Russian counterattack and was the same which the Soviet army newspaper Red Star a few hours earlier reported had thrown the Nazi invaders out of three defense lines and five towns and still was continuing after three days.)

Gomel is about 170 miles south of Smolensk and 140 miles north of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine.

Twenty-five Russian divisions would total 375,000 or more men, while the two air-borne brigades would number possibly 5000 or more.

In addition to the 78,000 captives claimed at Gomel, German military quarters said 330,000 Russians had been taken prisoner thus far in the Ukraine.

In that southern sector of deepest German penetration, the Russians were said to have counterattacked with large tank formations to relieve the German pressure so that sizable Soviet units could withdraw to the east bank of the broad Dneiper.

The high command reported successful attacks on the bridgeheads, with destruction of 65 tanks. Divebomber attacks on boatloads of fleeing Russian troops, moreover, were said to have splotched the river with countless dead.

German military commentators meanwhile were regarding Odessa as a closed chapter, its capture inevitable. Under full siege, Odessa was cut off completely from the rest of Russia both by land and by sea, the commentators declared.

British Deny Plan to Trade With Japan Is 'Appeasement'

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 20.—Newspaper warnings that Britain's newly-disclosed arrangements for possible trade with Japan might be considered appeasement brought hurried insistence from authoritative quarters tonight that the government was not retreating in the least from its stand against aggression in the Far East.

Recalling Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's recent declaration that kid glove diplomacy was in the discard, these sources said Britain was "standing absolutely in line with the United States and Netherlands governments and not receding a single inch from the stand taken when Japanese assets were frozen."

At the same time, these sources said that while Britain had given Thailand (Siam) no specific assurances of military aid if her independence should be threatened, "that does not mean we are not ready to take strong steps against aggression."

Critics Unappeased

Sharp-eyed critics, however, seemed unlikely to be contented by efforts to minimize yesterday's announcement of arrangements for "clearing accounts" to handle possible future trade with Japan.

Authoritative quarters insisted that no trade licenses had yet been issued and that any which might be granted would provide for sending to Japan goods unrelated to war.

They said reports that the arrangement contemplated a barter agreement emanated solely from a Japanese source in Singapore and evidenced "some wishful thinking on the part of the Japanese."

The London News Chronicle, however, said it was "nonsense" to contend that Japan would get only materials not essential to war.

"The trouble is," it said, "that those who make agreements such as the proposed Japanese agreement do not recognize that Japan, like Germany, is an enemy of the cause for which we are fighting.

"Ten years of naked aggression have not opened their eyes to this fact."

Tokyo, Aug. 20.—Americans who have been hard pressed for funds because of asset-freezing regulations were cheered today when the American Embassy announced that arrangements had been made with Washington permitting them to draw on their funds in the United States up to $500 a month.

This solved one problem. Now they must find a bank which will accept their dollar checks and must then wait for a Japanese license to draw upon funds thus deposited. No such license has been issued so far and "designated" foreigners face the prospect of making ends meet on the 500 yen monthly allowed for living expenses.

Germans Find Fighting, Mud Like World War

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 20.—Fighting from mudholes on the Eastern front gives German warriors of the new generation this much to boast of—now they can talk on even terms with their fathers, veterans of the trench warfare of the World War.

Corpl. Hans Juergen Weidlich presented a mudhole view of the new war in an account he entitled "Days of Trench Warfare" just sent back to Berlin.

"Dense fog envelops our position," Weidlich wrote. "Mist turns into rain; incessantly it falls upon us in thin stripes. With our tent cloths we built roofs over our holes, dump earth upon them, and thus are reasonably protected from the worst drenching.

"The rain falls monotonously. It beats on our roofs, tinkles on steel helmets, makes the ground gluey and sticks on our uniforms. To protect our carbines from moisture requires the greatest of effort.

"Stoically we squat in our holes and somehow wait for some beginning or end.

"Suddenly Jahn shouts from his hole, 'It's fun, anyway! At last we experience the World War. Now when we get home we can tell our fathers that we, like them, really lay in the mud.'

"The Bolsheviks meanwhile have resumed their furious fire. Anti-tank guns shoot, shrapnel bursts, grenades fly over our heads, whistling, howling and roaring through the rain."

Weidlich went on to report that his group was relieved toward evening and went to a nearby barn to rest, only to have another fierce Russian artillery attack in the early morning cut short their sleeping time and kill two of their comrades.

The men spent the rest of the day cleaning their uniforms and equipment, but kept their wet boots on.

"We preferred to dry them on our feet—another experience we can tell our fathers," Weidlich wrote. "And we, like our fathers, have not taken them off for weeks."

U. S. Urged to Hold 100 Japanese for Each American

By the Associated Press

Representative Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan, suggested to President Roosevelt yesterday that the United States hold as hostages 100 Japanese for every American prevented from leaving Japan.

Dingell wrote the President that he understood that the Tokyo government had forbade the departure of 100 Americans in reprisal for the freezing of Japanese assets in this country.

R.A.F. Smashes Nazi Airdrome

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Aug. 20.—Britain's Blenheim bombers escorted by fighter patrols smashed an enemy airdrome near Alknaor, Holland, this afternoon and attacked a number of patrol vessels near the Frisian Islands as the R. A. F. increased the tempo of its offensive after being partially storm bound last night.

Meanwhile, fighters continued to carry out offensive patrols over the Channel and northern France and the daylight duels cost the Luftwaffe three fighter planes. Two R. A. F. machines are missing but the pilot of one was saved.

The President's Day

By International News Service

GLAMOUR BOY: Most interesting and lively of the President's callers yesterday was bronzed and dapper Senor Munoz Marin, president of the Puerto Rican Senate, who went into Mr. Roosevelt's office promptly at noon to tell him Puerto Rico stood ready, willing and able to do anything the President might want them to do—afterward he held correspondents spellbound with some very fast, furious and funny talk, neatly sideslipped telling what he told the President, and what the President told him. Mr. Roosevelt and his watchdogs were charmed.

AS I SAID: The President meant what he said when he turned thumbs down on the War Department's gargantuan building project in Arlington, called in Assistant Secretary of War John H. McCloy, Gen. Brehon Somervell, told them to forget the whole thing, start over with a new, smaller, design and site in mind.

BASHFUL BRITISH: Alfred Duff Cooper and friend Sir Ronald Campbell came to call, bustled in for 15 minutes of the President's time, slipped out by a side door to avoid waiting questioners.

LATE LUNCH: Vice President Wallace and the President had a late lunch at his desk after Roosevelt had talked at length with Danish Minister Henrik de Kauffmann about matters necessarily secret.

C'MON OVER: While plugging away over the now diminishing pile of accumulated paper work the President picked up the phone and told his neighbor and Secretary of State Cordell Hull to c'mon over around 3:30. At 3:30 Hull came, left with a can't-tell expression and no revelations as to what his second last-minute confab within two days centered around.

OFF AGAIN?: The President will probably be off again today—this time for Hyde Park and a meeting with the Duke of Kent—all of which gave rise to some rumors that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are expected here sooner than anyone thinks. They're now scheduled to pass through here in September en route to the Duke's Calgary, Canada, ranch.

Man Shortage Brings Glamour To Gas Stations

Philadelphia, Aug. 20 (AP).—Manpower shortage in defense areas is bringing glamor to gasoline.

Attractive young girls chosen for charm, poise and ability are getting a chance to show what they can do as filling station attendants.

The Sun Oil Co. decided to experiment and selected eight winsome lassies for training before testing their efficiency at the pumps.

Only high school graduates, 21 to 28 years old, who passed physical and personality tests were considered. Bleached blondes and high heels were outlawed.

Starting in at a station in the city's fashionable main line outskirts, the cuties will do such less exacting chores as wiping windshields, filling radiators, selling gas and oil and inflating tires. They'll work 6½ hours daily and get $100 a month.

N. Y. Pier Fire Toll Raised to 12

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Recovery of seven more bodies from debris-littered waters raised to 12 today the known death toll of Monday's Brooklyn waterfront fire, which destroyed the Cuba mail line freighter Panuco and the pier where she was moored.

Six of the bodies were those of longshoremen five of them Negroes, who apparently jumped overboard to escape the fast-spreading flames. The holds of the ship were still too hot to permit search, and police feared some of the 17 men still missing might have been trapped there. The Brooklyn District Attorney's office announced that its investigation of the fire showed "nothing in the way of sabotage."

Beware of Steps Leading to War, Pettengill Warns

The United States must not be put in a position where "American prestige demands American bloodshed" in war, former Representative Samuel B. Pettengill, of Indiana, and a Washington attorney, said last night at a meeting of the local chapter of the America First Committee.

Pettengill declared himself in favor of "any course of action the American people call for through their chosen representatives in Congress and added:

"I don't want to see Congress confronted with any fait accompli . . . with any more Iceland or a Dakar." He spoke at Friends Meeting House.

The former legislator said this country must find ways of "protecting itself against propaganda." The press, radio and moving pictures have "a sacred duty of complete truthfulness" in the present crisis, he stated, and urged equal radio time be given both factions on the intervention issue.

Roosevelt Gets Cub Pay as Copyreader

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 20.—The New York Daily Mirror sent a check today for $5.94 to President Roosevelt—cub headline writer's pay for one day under the Mirror's contract scale—for an editorial suggestion by the President, which the Mirror adopted.

The President, after having quoted from Carl Sandburg's biography of Lincoln at yesterday's press conference, was asked by a reporter what sort of a lead the President would put on the Story. Mr. Roosevelt suggested, "President Quotes Lincoln and Draws Parallel."

That was the Mirror headline today.

The Mirror said it deducted from the $6 cub daily wage, 6 cents for social security (the President may thus draw 12 cents at the age of 65) and would pay 18 cents State unemployment tax.

I HEARD IT FROM MAX CORKLE

It was a fascinating story, so fascinating when it was told to me that I doubted my own ears . . . the story about this fellow named JOE and MR. JORDAN and MESSENGER 7013 and two blondes . . . one good . . . one bad, to say nothing of MAX CORKLE himself.

We finally put it all together and there it was, a complete story, a story off the beaten track, a story that had never been told before. True, it presented a great problem in casting. We were eager for performances which would present the most natural flow imaginable of the actors' individual talents, and now that it is all over and HERE COMES MR. JORDAN has been produced, we feel that we have succeeded.

Just a few years ago I was asked by my associates to endorse a great motion picture produced by our Studio. I refused because of a self-imposed rule I had observed in twenty-five years of motion picture production, during which time I had never openly communicated with the public regarding the merits of our own pictures.

Because of the extraordinary impression made upon me by HERE COMES MR. JORDAN, I am breaking my rule and giving public expression to my belief that we have made an impressive motion picture . . . a gay, funny, happy picture . . . a comedy which you will love.

I hope the public will forgive this venture into print; it may never happen again.

U. S. Troops Emulate German Tactics In Pincer Drives

By Richard C. Hottelet

United Press Staff Correspondent.

With the Second Army in Arkansas, Aug. 20.—The Seventh Corps of the Second United States Army today effectively used in its war games the pincers movement strategy which Adolf Hitler has employed so successfully in his European campaigns.

Supported by dive bombers, the corps moved onto the town of Washington, Ark., and a ridge to the westward and were credited with capturing both after encircling them.

The pincers strategy and the dive bombers gave some semblance of real warfare to the activities today, but the bombers were far less awe-inspiring than the Stukas the Germans used at Dunkerque.

The German JU 87s are equipped with sirens that sound as they fly level and heighten to an ear-splitting scream as they dive to attack. The psychological effect of this sound is such that I have seen troops become nervous wrecks after undergoing a day of such attacks.

One factor that handicaps the Army in its efforts to give the troops "wartime experience except for bullets" is the lack of even blank cartridges. One staff officer told me that Infantry men are being issued only two rounds of ammunition daily, while the Artillery is not firing at all.

Games Don't Compare To Actual Warfare

By Leon Kay

United Press Staff Correspondent.

With the Third Army in Louisiana, Aug. 20.—The war games here would be much more realistic if the soldiers had more blank cartridges.

In most respects the Army has been eminently successful in its effort to make this year's maneuvers the nearest thing possible to real war, but when and if these troops ever get into a battle I believe they'll find the "horrors of war" include a pandemonium that makes the scattered rifle fire and limited air activity in these games seem about like the popping of a paper sack.

Lieut. Gen. Leslie McNair explained that the maneuvers this year are on such a lavish scale that they will cost 25 million dollars more than the games in 1940, even without blank ammunition in sufficient quantity to make the encounters sound as well as look like a war.

He admitted there would be some value to submitting the troops to this kind of realism if only to test the effect on their nerves of the colossal chorus of noise that accompanies modern warfare.

So far as physical activity is concerned, however, the soldiers are getting plenty of realism. In the phase of the games just closed, which sent the Fifth Corps against the Eighth in "open" maneuvers, the troops struggled for 72 hours, marching through blackouts at night and sweating and fighting chiggers and mosquitoes in 90-degree temperatures during the days.

Dashing in a car over the huge maneuver area I often saw begrimed, unshaved soldiers munching food in the turret of a tank as it thundered along a road or stealing a nap in an armored car or truck or on the sloping porch of a village general store.

Stimson Says Defense Effort Up to People

Denver, Aug. 20 (AP).—Secretary Stimson, arriving simultaneously today with a severe thundershower accompanied by hail, said the Nation's defense effort "will function as far as the sentiment of the people will spur it on.

"It is not functioning the way we should like to see it," he told reporters. "However, all things considered, I believe it is moving along satisfactorily."

Stimson, in company with Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, landed here for a combination inspection trip and mountain tour. They left Washington this morning.

The Secretary said he and Marshall probably would leave Friday for the Pacific Northwest war games.

War Sidelights

Government Flees Berlin, Moscow Says

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Aug. 20.—The Moscow radio, as heard by the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System, asserted tonight that the German government was planning to leave Berlin for a more secure city in southern Germany.

The Russian broadcast added that several ministers already had left Berlin with skeleton staffs and that the transfer of entire departments was contemplated for the fall, when, it is expected, British air raids will increase in frequency and strength.

Vacations Delayed

Berlin, Aug. 20 (AP).—Germans were urged today to postpone their vacations until winter with the explanation that "several hundred thousand beds have been installed in numerous hotels and are not available for transients."

The Frankfurter Zeitung explained the war has eliminated the favorite North Sea bathing resorts as a vacation area, resulting in more vacationers than there are accommodations in the remainder of the Reich.

A Life Is Saved

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, Aug. 20.—Quick action by Pilot Officer V. R. Bono, former California transport pilot, is credited with saving the life of Pilot Officer B. W. Olson, of Boise, Idaho, both members of the Second American Eagle Squadron, returning from R. A. F. operational flights over France yesterday.

Bono saw a Messerschmitt fighter approaching Olson's plane and tried to warn him, but failed. Then Bono attacked the Messerschmitt, shot it down and raced to the side of Olson's plane, which had been hit by the German machine-gun bullets.

"I saw he was going to try a crash landing in France and I shouted to him over the radio: 'Don't turn. Keep going straight. You have plenty of height.'" Bono said.

"Apparently he heard me because he began to glide towards the English coast. When nearly over this side I saw him with his parachute opened, going down towards the sea—and I saw two rescue boats dashing up."

Olson was one of the four fighter pilots picked out of the Channel yesterday by the sea rescue service.

'Proper Spirit' Lacking in U.S., Knudsen Says

By Bert Andrews

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

A new Administration campaign to awaken the American people to their peril, in line with President Roosevelt's statement of Tuesday that the Nation must realize that it has a war to win, was begun yesterday when William S. Knudsen, director general of the Office of Production Management, drove home some good and bad truths about the defense program.

The man who gave up a $300,000-a-year automobile job to earn $1 a year as the boss of defense program told a press conference that the United States is not showing the "proper spirit" in the defense effort —"probably because no one has dropped any bombs on us yet."

However, while acknowledging that arms and aircraft still were not being turned out at a satisfactory rate, he voiced complete confidence that the combined output of the United States and Great Britain eventually would serve to overcome the Axis powers, declaring:

"I don't see how anybody in God's earth can outdo us. I've seen the other places. I know what they can do and what we can do when we get the correct spirit of cooperation."

Knudsen predicted that when defense industries reach their peak they might have to come to a 64-hour work week, such as prevails in many industries in England, but asserted that "we couldn't handle that yet."

He disclosed that representatives of automobile manufacturers would be notified at a conference here today how much their production must be curtailed in September, October and November.

Knudsen would not reply to a charge made Thursday by Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, that the defense program was a "failure" to date, and that in July, out of a total of 1,460 planes, about 700 were training planes. However, Knudsen did say this:

"The proportion of fighter planes to training planes has gone up during the last month and will go up still more next month."

"Do you think there will be enough equipment in six months?"

He thought that over for half a minute and then said, "Yes, I think so."

Returning to the curtailment of automobile production, a questioner asked Knudsen if he thought the restrictions on the sale of gasoline would hurt the sales of automobiles.

"No, I don't," he said emphatically. "As long as a man can get a gallon of gas, he'll try to get a car to put it in. What sells autos is that a man wants to go from A to B sitting down."

British Shell Djibuti Ship, Vichy Reports

By the United Press

Vichy, Aug. 20.—Sharp outbreaks of fighting on land and sea between British and French forces in a tightening of Britain's "hunger blockade" around French Somaliland were reported tonight.

British warships prowling French territorial waters off Djibuti were said to have penetrated into the gulf and shelled a small French vessel Monday as it sought to bring badly-needed supplies to the encircled colony in East Africa.

Frontier fighting also was reported in radio reports to Vichy which said that British troops had repeatedly attacked French border posts and had been fired on each time.

"Attempting to Starve Us"

The disclosure of the attacks on Djibuti and French Somaliland isolated from Vichy for a month because of a radio breakdown, came today when radio transmission was restored and colonial authorities transmitted accounts of what they described as "an extremely acute situation."

"The British are attempting to starve us out," the radio messages to the Petain government in Vichy said.

Each day British planes fly over Djibuti and "there are constant troop movements along our frontiers as well as many attacks on our posts," it was stated.

"To the hunger blockade is added a war of nerves in an attempt to break us down. For a year this situation has had a deplorable effect on the health of the population and especially on the less hardy natives."

Clash in Syria Reported

The reports said a British gunboat, moving in from the Gulf of Aden Monday, shelled the small French vessel and that two British warships invaded the Gulf of Djibuti Tuesday, each violating French territorial waters.

Paris press dispatches from Ankara, meanwhile, reported that the British had proclaimed a state of siege in all of Syria, following a clash between British soldiers and Arabs at Aleppo, in which several persons were killed and many injured.

R. A. F. Pilots Toast a Memory

(As Associated Press correspondent with the British Expeditionary Force in France, Drew Middleton became acquainted with members of an R. A. F. fighter squadron stationed outside Lille. Here he describes a new meeting with the fliers—in honor of one of the squadron's fallen heroes—Editor's note.)

By Drew Middleton,

Associated Press Staff Writer

An R. A. F. Fighter Station in England, Aug. 20.—We drank a toast last night to Dickie Lee, a clean-looking lad who looked like a doll and fought like a devil.

Lee was shot down over France a year ago yestreday and his squadron held a dinner in his honor.

The squadron leader told me when I arrived that dinner would be delayed a bit because his men had had a bit of a show during the afternoon and were late getting in.

We had a drink and waited in the mess. One by one the pilots came in. I knew a couple, but most of them were strangers.

"I expect you'll find some changes," the leader said. "We've had some bad luck. It was a long time ago and a long ways away. . . ."

Well, yes and no. It is only a half-hour as a Spitfire flies to that other airfield outside Lillie, and October, 1939, isn't so far away.

When the old gang arrived you noticed immediately a lot of them weren't flying any more. They had lost that confident look of combat pilots. I asked one what he was doing.

"Instructor, worst luck," he said. "Got a bit of bullet in my back over Calais in May this year. Won't let me do operational work and I miss it like the very devil."

We sat down to dinner. It wasn't as it once was. Around the table were new faces in place of those boys who used to curse the weather in France and the "phoney war."

The squadron leader told of exploits by Lee, of the two Heinkels he shot down while flying home on leave, or how he was shot down twice and thrice escaped from behind German lines, or how he won the D. S. C. for his work over Dunkerque and of how last August 19 members of the squadron waited on the flying field for the sound of his motor and never heard it.

With dinner over, the squadron leader stood up and said: "Gentlemen, the King."

The men drank to the health of their sovereign. Then they drank a toast to the President of the United States and, looking at a picture of Prime Minister Churchill on the wall, "to the old man."

"This dinner is for Dickie Lee," then said the leader. "I won't get sloppy. He hated that sort of muck. . . . I suppose he was a hero. But more than that he was a gentleman. He laughed a lot and was kind to his friends . . . What more can you say of a man? Gentlemen, I ask you to rise and drink to Dickie Lee."

Germany Ousts Cuban Consuls

Berlin, Aug. 20 (AP).—The German government tonight handed the Cuban charge d'affaires a note ordering the Cuban consular staff to leave the country, Dienst Aus Deutschland reported. A similar order was issued by the Italian government.

(Cuba has ordered expulsion of seven German consuls and one Italian, and Germany earlier had responded by demanding withdrawal of Cuban consuls from German-occupied territories. Expulsion of Cuban consuls from Germany herself carries the retaliation a step further).

keep "cruising" to a minimum and promised to cooperate. At the same time they expressed criticism of regulatory policies and volunteered suggestions.

Davies' statistical report, the first of its kind to be made public since a gasoline shortage began to be feared, points out that gasoline stocks dropped 893,000 barrels last week as the diversion of tankers to defense needs and Britain made itself felt.

"The public must face the fact that the supplies of petroleum and its products available on the East Coast are beginning to decline sharply," he declared.

"There are reports being circulated that the stock situation is good, that there is no real cause for alarm, that the warnings of an impending shortage are 'phony.' The only thing that is phony are these false reports that we are in no danger."

The cold figures are "signals of danger," he warned, indicating "the danger point to be approaching rapidly."

This time last year, he said, the industry had a tanker reserve available for the 10 to 12 per cent increase in fuel oil shipments that occurs in winter. Today, he explained, there is no such reserve.

"We must conserve gasoline stocks now to avoid a drastic shortage this winter when our tankers must be used to haul fuel oils unless our people are to be left to freeze and our defense industry shut down for lack of power."

Davies said the Office of Petroleum Coordinator was keeping in close touch with British authorities and all diversions to date had been fully warranted.

Only Now Being Felt

"The full effect of the transfers is only now being felt," he said. "Meanwhile, any assertions that the working stocks and reserve stocks on the East Coast are in firm positions are totally misleading, and are based on wishful thinking—not facts. Let no one be deluded."

Highlight figures divulged by Davies included:

Of 20,476,000 barrels of gasoline stored on the East Coast last week, 14 million barrels were unavailable for use because they are at the bottom of tanks, full of sludge or in technical process in refineries. Thus, only 6,476,000 barrels were actually available—a ten-day supply—said Davies.

(A petroleum coordinator's office spokesman told The Post that this proportion of unusable gasoline was normal; that it amounted to approximately the same on the corresponding date of last year.)

Stocks of light heating and fuel oils are at lower levels by 1,400,000 barrels than this time last year.

Stocks of heavy industrial oil are 2½ million barrels less than they were last year, in the face of a 10 per cent increase in demand.

Average daily requirement of gasoline shipments from the Gulf Coast to supply the East Coast during the week ended August 9 was 461,500 barrels, but shipments were only 340,300 barrels, leaving a deficit of 121,200 barrels daily, or 848,400 for the week.

Consumption of gasoline on the East Coast is 12 per cent of last year, despite declining shipments. Consumption last week exceeded current supplies by 893,000 barrels.

Oil companies are refusing to enter into contracts to provide for a winter's supply of fuel oil. Davies said the coordinator's office is being deluged with demands for assistance.

Regarding the Washington situation, a Standard Oil Co. spokesman explained that the 30 per cent rationing plan for the remainder of August will not apply to certain accounts. These include such "essential" buyers as the Federal and District Governments, public utilities, physicians and certain others.

He emphasized that the percentage allowance is not inflexible, that it may be changed before the end of the month.

Alexandria gasoline dealers affiliated with major oil companies prepared yesterday to ration fuel to their customers, after receiving notices their monthly gasoline supply would be reduced 10 per cent, beginning immediately. The reduction will be based on figures reported by the dealers for gasoline consumption in the month of July.

A number of Alexandria dealers already are refusing to sell more than 5 gallons of gasoline to a customer in an effort to conserve their stock.

Presidents of four large Washington taxicab companies — Diamond, Premier, Bell and Arrow—told The Post they would cooperate in the Public Utilities Commission request to save motor fuel by reducing cruising where possible.

Offer Criticisms

They went on, however, to voice various criticisms.

"You can't blame drivers for not making greater use of the fire hydrant hack stands than they do," said Harry Davis, head of Diamond.

The P. U. C. has sent a letter to all drivers urging wider utilization of these newly set aside spaces as one means of reducing cruising.

"A hundred and fifty of these fireplug stands were proposed to the commission and then, after a year's study, they approved 48 which are in the worst locations," Davis continued. "The good ones were eliminated."

Although Diamond depends principally on its concessions and on telephone orders for its business, rather than on cruising, any drastic reduction of this practice would work a real hardship to cab users, including defense officials, Davis declared.

Leon Brill, Jr., president of Bell Cab, said his drivers are being instructed to play call boxes and stands as much as possible instead of cruising for fares.

"I don't know if curtailing cruising is the answer, but we are going to try to cut it down," said Brill. We'll work 100 per cent with the P. U. C."

Jack Royer, president of Premier, likewise expressed sympathy with the plan, but added that real teeth could be put in the anticruising program if 200 additional hack stands were established.

"Roving the streets without a passenger burns up about a gallon of gas an hour," said Royer. "Two hundred more stands would result in a considerable gasoline saving."

The president of Arrow, Harry Trainor, pointed out that his drivers depend almost entirely on cruising for their business. He advocated establishment, along with Royer, of more downtown stands. The fire hydrant stands, he said, are too inconspicuous and generally difficult for a driver to squeeze into, Trainor added.

HEARING IMPROVED AFTER USING OROTUNE

NOW HEARS CLOCK AT 20 FEET

O. H. Wells, Huntington Park, Cal., writes: "Before using Orotune I had to have my ear right up to the clock to hear the chimes. After using one bottle of Orotune, I can hear the chimes very well at 20 feet. Send me another bottle."

Thousands now deafened, annoyed by buzzing, ringing, hissing, head noises, clogged up feeling in ears, would get relief and hear clearly and distinctly again if impacted wax that blocks ear canals and presses on sensitive ear drums was removed.

Use Orotune as directed. It is safe and contains an ingredient especially recommended for this purpose.

Daring Paratroops Crushed As 3 'Battles' Rage in Virginia

VIRGINIA MANEUVERS—Paratroops from Marine Corps planes land on the A. P. Hill Military Reservation, Caroline County, Va., in antitank maneuvers yesterday. Ground troops quickly mopped up the air-borne fighters

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

A. P. Hill Military Reservation, Va., Aug. 20.—For the first time in these parts, parachute troops took a hand in mimic battle today and were mopped up almost before they landed.

As a realistic touch to a progressively fierce defense against tanks by antitank units of the Second Army Corps, three planes loaded with parachutists dropped them on two fields near Acors Corners to capture corps headquarters. Warned by airplane and ground detection systems, corps commanders rushed a troop of the 104th Cavalry in scout cars to the scene.

Flying over the field at 300 feet, the planes, from the Marine Base at Quantico, each left behind eight men dangling from billowing white canopies. So precisely was the operation carried out that in the case of one load only 29 seconds elapsed fro mthe moment the first man stepped from the ship until the last one out had landed.

Ends Exercises

On the ground they cast off their chutes, rushed to retrieve machine guns dropped previously, and raced into position. They found the scout cars of the cavalry already coming, encircling them.

Today's battle, ending two days of exercises demonstrating use of all arms in defense against mechanized attack, assumed a situation in which the Forty-fourth Infantry Division was holding the center of the corps' line, the Twenty-eighth on its right, the Twenty-ninth on its left. A heavy tank attack was launched on the Forty-fourth to get back to corps and Army headquarters and pinch off the Twenty-eighth Division against the Rappahannock River.

Boring in from the north, the tanks struck the front line, supported by infantry antitank units, and ripped it apart, leaving one tank impaled in a field of upright logs, another straddling a trench from which infantry scuttled out of its path.

Those which broke through roared on southward, while frantic calls went back for light elements of the division antitank battalion. These charged into action, their crews leaping from their trucks and unlimbering just in time to lay down a curtain of fire which drove the tanks to cover.

Halter by the antitank guns, the tanks radioed for help from the air, which quickly came and launched a diving attack on the little 37-millimeter guns exposed in the open fields. Then the tanks came on again, sweeping through the remnants of the light defenses.

Attack Melted Away

In a third effort to halt them, the 75 millimeter guns of the division antitank battalion were summoned and laid down a fire through which the tanks wove and dodged, methodically working toward each gun from front and flanks.

The tanks did not let their battle rest there. While the antitankers were concentrating on the attack in their front, another tank force made its way down to the south and came up in rear of the defensive area. The Forty-fourth sent out an S O S which the Twenty-eighth answered with a company of tank destroyers, 37-millimeter guns mounted on half-ton trucks. These dashed in among the tanks and mixed with them in a battle royal which ended when the tank attack melted into nothing.

Along with these two battles, the corps during this time handled the parachute attack on its headquarters, and the roar of three battles, where firecrackers took the place of blank ammunition, merged one into the other.

Corps antitank units, consisting of more than 6000 officers and men, will begin the return trip to their bases tomorrow. All will be back home by Saturday under present plans.

Soviet Outcome Vital to U. S., Patterson Says

Special Dispatch to The Post

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Undersecretary of War Patterson today warned that a Nazi victory in Russia would put "Hitler and his pals well on the way to their coveted world dominion."

In a speech here before the New York State Federation of Labor he appealed to workers not to be "misled" by the Nazi-Soviet struggle into believing that the democracies have been given a breathing spell.

At the same time labor is arming the defense forces, he said, it must play "its most vital role" in seeing that the American people "are armed against those who whisper discord and defeatism."

Patterson praised the building trades unions for their part in what he called "the biggest construction job in military history"—erection in 300 days of 48 munitions plants and housing for 1,200,000 troops.

Out of 62 million man-days worked by building tradesmen, he said, work stoppages cost only 44,000 man-days.

Parole Officers' Views Sought On Crime Bill

Return of the habitual criminal bill to the Senate District Committee in order to give parole board officials an opportunity to express their views on its was urged yesterday by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas.

He said he had learned from parole officials that the bill takes away most of the discretion of the courts in sentencing persons convicted of felonies after a first time.

Under the bill the indeterminate sentence would be abolished for all except first offenders. Exponents of the measure point out that the courts would be forced to impose maximum sentences, despite extenuating circumstances, and at the conclusion of his term the convict would be released without the benefit of adjustment to his surroundings under the parole system.

Already passed by the House, the bill is one of several recent ones designed to curb crime in the District. Its passage was urged Tuesday by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

Shipyard Strike Parley Fails

Persistent reports circulated yesterday that pressure had been brought on Green to relinquish the strike objective and that waters had been badly muddied behind the scenes by information brought to the White House intimating that Green would settle for something less than the Mediation Board recommendation.

Coupled with these reports was a conjecture that Myron C. Taylor, former chairman of the board of United States Steel Co., of which the struck plant is a subsidiary, had believed Green had "softened" under urging from other labor circles.

Taylor, the President's special emissary to the Vatican, has appeared in negotiations with Green and Korndorff in the last two days. It was recalled that when he headed the gigantic steel company he was reported to have received assurances in 1937 from John L. Lewis, then C. I. O. president, that the C. I. O. would never ask for a closed shop in the United States Steel empire.

Asked last night about reports that he had talked to Lewis about the present strike, Taylor refused to confirm or deny them.

Green declined to name any person who had pressed him to give up the maintenance of membership demand. To reports that "something was being messed up behind the scenes," he replied:

"You may have something there, and God help the man who is doing it when I find out who he is."

Asked about a reported five-hour conference Tuesday with Allan Haywood, C. I. O. official, who has been considered a representative of Lewis, Green declared that Haywood had supported him completely and had in no way asked him to "back down."

Asked if Lewis had participated in the matter, Green declared that he had not talked to the former C. I. O. chieftian, but declined further comment.

He said his letter to the President reported that he and the company had negotiated, as requested, but "were still as far apart as the two poles," on the fundamental issue of maintenance of membership. Green said he stated the union's position on the question and wrote the President that further negotiations would be fruitless, and therefore requested the President to take the situation in hand again.

From other quarters it was learned that there had been complete agreement on the part of the Mediation Board, OPM, Navy and Maritime Commission with the White House for Federal occupation of the plant, but that the seizure had been held in abeyance by the last-minute interjection into the dispute of "other people."

Work on 493 million dollars of naval and Maritime Commission construction has been halted in the yards since August 7.

Rising Antagonism to Advertising by Officials and Congress During the Last 10 Years Is Cited in Publishers' Report

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 20.—The American Newspaper Publishers Association asserted today that the last 10 years had shown "increasing evidence of antagonism to advertising with a desire by various agencies and officials of government to control, or regulate or prohibit advertising."

In a membership bulletin captioned: "Government takes a haul more and more in advertising matters," the Association listed a dozen examples of so-called Government concern with advertising and asked: "What is to be done about this proposition now?"

Such a Government trend, the Association continued, seemed increasing and took a variety of forms such as:

"Attacks on the accuracy and truth of advertising; taxes on advertising; attacks on the ground that advertising is an economic waste; elimination of advertising by groups which are under the control of some agencies; efforts to eliminate harmless 'puffery' in advertising language; the building up of consumer distrust of advertising; and legislation to prohibit certain forms of advertising or advertising by certain groups and professions."

Principal Government agencies and individuals who consistently attacked some aspects or kinds of advertising, the bulletin added, were the Department of Agriculture, Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, the Federal Alcohol Administration and, to a limited degree, certain elements in the Federal Trade Commission.

The association said that publishers had no quarrel with those who seek to eliminate false and misleading advertising and that the publishers themselves had voluntarily achieved much in that direction already with the advertisers and advertising agencies, "all of whom have recognized the necessity of truth in advertising," cooperating readily.

"The practices of the agencies in the Government, however, of using the term 'false advertising' as a mask with which to cloak a very evident desire to restrict or prohibit all advertising or subject it to Government control have been and will continue to be protested by those sincerely interested in advertising," the association asserted.

Examples Cited

The association cited these as some examples of Government attention to advertising:

A 1933 order by the Animal Industry Bureau of the Agriculture Department deleting from Jones' Dairy Farm sausage advertising a jingle—"most little pigs go to market. The best little pigs go to Jones'"—on the grounds that it was misleading inasmuch as all "the best little pigs" did not necessarily "go to Jones'."

A recent Federal Trade Commission order compelling monument companies to cease advertising certain stones as "everlasting" or as "enduring forever" on the grounds that the claims were exaggerated.

Codes under the NRA imposing advertising restrictions on industries.

Federal Alcohol Administration "censorship" of the liquor industry and right of agency to review liquor advertising before publication.

A recommendation by Leon Henderson, Administrator of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, that bakers avoid price increases by reducing operating costs, including advertising.

Assistant Attorney General Arnold's utterances and writings attaking advertising on the grounds that advertising helped create monopolies, and Justice Department consent decrees in antitrust cases against the Ford and Chrysler Motor companies imposing advertising restrictions upon them.

Pending price control bills before Congress giving the President what the association said was possible authority to forbid advertising of any sort.

S. E. C. advertising restrictions which the association said had virtually eliminated "all financial advertising."

House Starts Shell Plant Probe

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 20 (AP).—George J. Shillito, special investigator for the House Military Affairs Committee, has begun an investigation into charges of alleged "wasteful spending" in construction of the Government's huge, Wolf Creek shell-loading plant at Milan, Tenn.

Shillito came here after spending the day at Milan, where he said he questioned Army officials and contractors.

Shillito asserted he had been assigned to the investigation by Representative Andrew J. May (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, after a Memphis newspaper charged that three Government auditors had offered their resignations in protest against alleged "irregularities" at the plant.

The big plant is being built by the Ferguson-Oman Construction Co. on a cost-plus-fixed-fee basis.

Parley Drafting Plan to Cut Gas Consumption

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 20.—The Petroleum Marketing Committee for the Eastern Seaboard, comprising representatives of leading Eastern oil companies, met behind closed doors today to draft recommendations for effecting a reduction in gasoline consumption in the 17-State Eastern seaboard area.

H. W. Dodge, vice president of the Texas company and committee chairman, said the committee's recommendations would be sent to Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes without being divulged here.

Walter F. Burke, president of Local 917, Gasoline Station and Parking Attendants Union (A. F. L.), issued a statement urging gasoline station workers to close their pumps. "March to City Hall in a body and demand that Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia intercede for them in this unjust program of Mr. Ickes."

Addressing his remarks to Interior Secretary Ickes, petroleum coordinator, Burke declared:

"If you expect to throw 200,000 men out of work and expect them to stand on the corner and wave an American flag, you have a vast stretch of imagination.

"If you are really sincere in a gas conservation program, tell us how much you want to save and we will show you how to d it without the loss of jobs."

Meanwhile, in Atlanta Gov. Eugene Talmadge expressed doubt that he had authority to prevent gasoline sales on Sundays in Georgia, as a conservation measure.

He said he would study the question further, following a request by a delegation headed by James Robinson, president of the Georgia Association of Petroleum Dealers, that he require all filling stations in the State to be closed on Sundays.

Robinson contended a State-wide closing was essential if Atlanta filling station operators were not to be penalized by a city ordinance banning Sunday gasoline sales within the city.

Washington Civic Theater Girds for Busiest Season

Pretentious Schedule of Plays Now Under Way; Army Training Films for Invited Audience; News Notes and Gossip of the Amusement World

THE WASHINGTON CIVIC THEATER means business.

Fresh from his summertime triumphs in the timothy fields of Long Island, Leon Askin, director of the Civic, has returned to the Capital full to the brim with enthusiasm and high plans for the new season, which, as we revealed here months ago, will be conducted on a new policy of tightened showmanship and more compact efficiency.

CHARLES CHAPLIN

Instead of intermittent productions, separated by waits of weeks—thus necessitating a new "sales campaign" on behalf of each—the Civic's 1941-42 season will be marked by continuous presentation of 10 plays without hiatus. Each will be given 12 performances in Wardman Park, which the Civic will occupy on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week. The first three plays already have been decided upon and are in course of preliminary preparation. They are "The American Way," Robert Ardrey's "Thunder Rock," which just missed being a hit in this country but has enjoyed an enormous run in England, and "Troilus and Cressida," to be given a production in the Elizabethan manner.

Open tryouts for membership in the acting group will be held at the Civic Theater headquarters, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, daily beginning at 5 p. m., from September 2 to 7, inclusive.

On his round of the press yesterday, Mr. Askin was accompanied by Miss Ann Starr, newly appointed publicity director and general manager of the Washington Civic Theater. Miss Starr exudes enthusiasm no less than Leon over both the theater and the newspaper game, having had long experience as a working newspaper woman and with the Theater Guild, to which ambition as a playwright first attracted her. Miss Starr approaches her new duties as a full-time job and not a sporadic enterprise that will make demands upon her talents only at intervals of months. Present plans are to open the new Civic season early in October and then keep it going without a break —a sagacious idea that could have been adopted long ago to advantage.

What Goes on in Those Camps

Tonight at 8, in the Archives Building Auditorium, the War Department will screen its new series of Army training films for the first time before a specially invited male audience. The films were produced in Hollywood by the Signal Corps in conjunction with the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and have never before been exhibited for public comment. Owing to the confidential character of much of the subject matter of the films, tonight's will be, at least in part, an "off the record" showing.

So many people are asking so many queer questions about it, that we might as well go on record again that "The Wookey," opening the season at the National Theater Monday night, has nothing to do with Lewis Carroll and his jabberwocky, nor yet is it a child's game or a fragment of nursery rhyme. Just as the Irish say The McManus, for instance, to indicate a McManus who stands head and shoulders above all other members of the McManus tribe, so Horace Wookey, the Cockney hero of the Frederick Hazlitt Brennan play, often is referred to as The Wookey by his colleagues and blitz-ridden friends. Hence "The Wookey," so let's have no more wisecracks about it.

Incidentally, picturegoers who enthused over M-G-M's picturization of "Pride and Prejudice," a few months back, will discover two of the players in that splendid film even more prominently cast in "The Wookey." They are Edmund Gwenn, in the title role, and Heather Angel, cast as his daughter—the same relationship, by the way, as existed between them in the picture. The coincidence extends ever farther than that. Robert Sinclair, who directed the stage production of the Jane Austen fiction for Max Gordon, also is the director of "The Wookey."

Guests to Become Members

The first thing we know, all those Hollywood stars, who have been guests of the Washington Variety Club on their various visits to the National Capital, will be members with their own cards of admission and all the privileges attaching thereto. John H. Harris, founder and National Chief Barker, of the Variety Clubs of America, announces that a charter has been issued for a new tent, to be known as the Variety Club of Southern California, with headquarters in Los Angeles. The charter presentation will take place at an inaugural banquet at the famous Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles the middle of September and will be attended by the full charter membership, newly elected officers and outstanding personalities of the motion picture industry. All the screen stars may become Varietieers, but we seem to have no use for "vice versa" at precisely this point.

Just when Hollywood seemed to be running out of things to name the "ten best" of, Director Alexander Hall comes along with his list of the ten best pantomimists on the screen—players who would still be stars even were the cinema to revert to silence, sans dialogue and sound. They are James Gleason, Charles Chaplin, Harpo Marx, Charlie McCarthy, Eddie Albert, John Barrymore, Ida Lupino, Walter Brennan, Rosalind Russell and James Cagney. Charlie McCarthy's other name, of course, is Edgar Bergen.

It will show the public something important about our flying forces

Wilson Line

TOURNAMENT DAY, a fifth annual jousting event, having been celebrated at Marshall Hall amusement park yesterday, the S. S. Mount Vernon also offers "Kiddies' Days" on Mondays and Fridays at the 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. sailings. There are moonlight cruises every night, except Mondays, at 8:30.

Potomac Line

BOBBY BYRNE'S Orchestra is the headline band for the twin Saturday night cruises of the S. S. Potomac. The steamer sails from its Seventh Street wharves at 8:45 p. m. and 12:30 a. m. The line also schedules all-day cruises to Colonial Beach on Wednesdays and Sundays, as well as nightly trips down the Potomac at 8:45.

LEONARD LYONS, whose Broadway column appears regularly on this page, is on vacation until September 1. His pithy paragraphs will be resumed here on that date.

Little

So gently has "Intermezzo" haunted its original audiences of some two years ago that it's something of a surprise to find a so-ready public waiting patiently for its return. And return it has, for a week's run, which opened yesterday at the Little.

This film, which introduced the lovely Ingrid Bergman to American picture-goers, has so fragile a mood, so quiet a dignity, that one would hardly expect it to have such vitality as well. Leslie Howard is the Swedish player's costar, acting what must be one of his three most memorable roles, with "Of Human Bondage" and "Pygmalion" completing the trio.

The essentially simple story concerns a celebrated violinist, whose wife, ably played by Edna Best, is all that a wife should be. Their home in Sweden is blest with two children and all a civilized man could desire. With the retirement of his accompanist, the musician seeks the quiet of his home, determined to settle down for a time. But the music teacher of his children is so charming a woman, so skilled a musician, that a bond develops between them that leads to a romantic interlude in the incomparable setting which once was Southern France. But maturity of thought and acknowledgement of reality makes this but an interlude, an intermezzo, of three lives.

In a film to which mood means so much, credit must be given to the understanding direction of Gregory Ratoff and the screen play George O'Neil adapted from the original Swedish of Costa Stevens and Gustav Molander. The production by David O. Selznick is superbly detailed; it was here, too, that one of the favorite melodies of the past year, "Intermezzo" made an effective reentrance to popularity. John Halliday, Ann Todd, Enid Bennett and Cecil Kellaway are importantly cast.

Columbia

While Red Skelton's latest film, a Dr. Kildare adventure, is opening further up the street this morning, his first starring vehicle, "Whistling in the Dark," will be reopening at the Columbia. Which certainly is nice going in filmland for a twenty-six year old from vaudeville.

"Whistling in the Dark" definitely establishes Red as a screen personality. It allows full play for his wisecracks even if it limits his use of the gags that made him a variety favorite. He plays a neat satire on radio stars in general—the hush-hush arch-detective in particular. As "The Fox" he offers such titivating mysteries over the air that some big-time gangsters take him into their employ—much against his will. So there he is in a house full of sliding panels, weird folk and dangerous folk, plotting a long-distance murder and keeping two girls on the romantic string—also unintentional.

Should all this impress you as not being particularly original fare —Ernest Truex played it on both stage and screen—remember that it is a new personality that's bobbing about in it. Skelton's humor, much on the demented side, strikes a new note that will be heard more and more frequently as the season progresses. For playmates he has the delectable Ann Rutherford, the sinister Conrad Veidt and the acidulous Eve Arden. Virginia Grey is his second leading lady in the piece.

HEDDA HOPPER

So Now It Comes Out

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 20. When Claudette Colbert didn't start work on "Remember the Day," over at Fox, after the initial announcement, the rumors flew thick and fast. First they'd given up the idea of the picture, then Claudette didn't want to play the school teacher role.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

Everyone had his own "inside dope" on the matter, and now I have, too, straight from Producer William Perlberg. Believe it or not, the cause of all the delay's been a frantic search for a 12-year-old leading man to appear with Claudette.

Little Roddy McDowell was perfect except that he's English, and they had to have a typical American boy. So they've been quietly testing dozens of youngsters and at last they've found the ideal "Dewey Roberts." He's Douglas Wheatcroft and this will be his first screen part. John Payne carries the love interest in the picture, but it is the profound influence of the boy on Claudette's character, and vice versa, which motivates the story and raises the boy's part to a lead. Pretty nice going for a 12-year-old, I calls it!

Warners really shot the works for their "Dive Bomber" premiere in San Diego. Flying down were Regis Toomey, who does a grand job in the picture; Bob Armstrong, with a super-super moustache; Herbert Anderson, who took over Eddie Albert's job, and the Navy Blues Sextette. Gang was met at the docks by Wayne Morris, looking handsome as all get-out in his new Navy uniform, and sped by motor boat to North Island for cocktails and dinner in the officers' mess. And when it comes to hospitality, these Navy officers and their wives certainly dish it out.

Back to San Diego for the premiere. Picture's done in gorgeous Technicolor. And what it shows you on the inside workings of our air force will certainly make you spread your peepers.

The many friends of Jessie Ralph, who is so beloved here, will be happy to know that since she's recovered from her operation, she'll soon be bound for a vacation at Gloucester, Mass., in a cottage facing the sea.

As captain in the Air Corps Reserve, Bob Cummings is required to put in a certain number of flying hours each month, so he's driving Director Sam Wood crazy by flying down to Coronado each day from the "Kings Row" set for his lunch. He phones his order down, makes the round trip in an hour and a half, with a half hour stopover . . . for food.

Jack Oakie is plenty mad on account of the bird fatalities out in his vicinity. He found that a crew of road workers, annoyed by the blackbirds, have been trapping and destroying them . . . But if they're anything like the papa mocking bird who's guarding a nest in my yard, they're pretty good at self-defense. Every morning I have to run the gantlet to my garage. Yesterday I didn't dodge quick enough when Mr. Mocking Bird came down like a Stuka dive bomber and went off with a nice hank of my black hair!

Priscilla Lane says Grauman's Chinese' forecourt has nothing on her new swimming pool. The evening the cement was poured, her cat, Miss Muffet, picked to entertain her friends and they've left as fancy a set of footprints as you'd hope to see immortalized on the pool's bottom.

Church Choir a Springboard To Contract Before Cameras

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Aug. 20.—Today we met Miss Janis Carter, newest of the movie lovelies and a girl who turned choir singing into big business.

That isn't all. Her wholesale church work led to musical comedy and that led to pictures, and here we have the blond and blue-eyed Miss Carter at Twentieth Century-Fox in her first movie, "Affirm or Deny," with Joan Bennett and Don Ameche. Not bad for a 23-year-old.

She graduated from Western Reserve University and to a job as hostess in the tea room of the Higbee department store in Cleveland, Ohio. Then she went to New York, with letters of recommendation from the boss to eateries there.

"I was lucky to get a job in Schraft's, in Wall Street," she reported. "I met a lot of people there who helped me later. Why, one of them even gave me a season ticket to the Metropolitan Opera Company for a tip."

Miss Carter hostessed by day and studied singing by night. Then she got a job singing in church of a Sunday and quit her restaurant work so she'd have more time to study voice. For a while she lived mostly on carrots, because they cost 4 cents a bunch.

"The Christian Scientists paid best, but you had to be a member of the church to get a soloist job," she said. "I wasn't a member, so I sang as much as possible in Jewish synagogues, which paid next best. On holidays you can sing all day in a synagogue and get $25. Anyhow, I finally worked out a schedule for weekends and I earned what seemed like a lot of money."

Her one-girl church circuit worked out like this: Friday night and Saturday morning, the synagogue, $10, extra on holidays; 6 a. m. mass in a Catholic church Sunday, $5; 11 a. m., the Episcopal church in New Rochelle, $7.50; 4 p. m., the Brooklyn German Lutheran Church, $2.50, and 8 p. m., the First Presbyterian Church on Fifth Avenue, $5.

"And on Wednesday nights I'd sing at a vesper service in Brooklyn. I only got $1 for this, but the organist always took me to dinner, so it worked out all right."

So Miss Carter was doing fine with her music. Week in and week out she earned more than many a concert artist. But that wasn't all. She modeled clothes between singing lessons and smiled her prettiest for the toothpaste ads.

"And then I auditioned for the Metropolitan Opera Company," she said. "They told me I'd have to gain about 20 pounds to be strong enough to be one of their lyric sopranos. And then I might not make it. And if I weighed 140 pounds instead of 120, I couldn't do any modeling. I was in a quandary.

"There were several agents in the auditorium room and afterward they all tried to sign me up. They were big talkers, but only one had an actual job to offer. I went into 'I Married an Angel' at $35 a week. I was one of Zorina's angels. For 13 months I wore wings. Then I got a better job in 'Panama Hattie' and the company went on the road and in Chicago I got my picture in all the papers. I happened to be going with the company's press agent at the time. Anyhow, there were those pictures. I got all kinds of modeling offers on the basis of them."

She was doing better than that in New York. Fox finally gave her a better offer, and rushed her to Hollywood last February.

Remember? Women's Silk Hose Didn't Go on View Until 1914

The National Geographic Society yesterday turned its attention from the women of Bali and the military geography of the Near East to the leg of the American woman. Shortage of silk from Japan prompted the following:

"Substitutes for silk stockings, proposed to relieve the current silk shortage, have aroused memories of candy-striped cotton hose of the Gibson girl era, and the lisle hose with lace insets worn in the gay nineties. Silk stockings for general wear, in fact, are relatively a new development on the American scene.

"When the United States entered the twentieth century, aproximately 1 woman out of 2000 wore silk stockings. While dresses remained long, the supply of silk hose stayed short. In 1899, when ruffled skirts swept the sidewalks, the total American output of silk stockings was 12,372 dozen pairs . . .

"Even in 1909, when feminine ankles began to make a few public appearances, the American silk stocking industry turned out only 434,000 dozen pairs . . .

"But the slit and hobbled skirt of 1914, ushering in the new brevity of World War fashions, opened in earnest the era of the silken limb . . . The 1939 production, before nylon hose entered the 1940 picture, was 840,486,000 pairs, counting both full-fashioned and seamless.

"Another striking change in the silk stocking industry is the customer shift—from men to women. In America's colonial days of powdered wigs, candlelight and duels, silk stockings were most in evidence as masculine finery . . . Portraits attest the popularity of white silk hose with George Washington and other Revolutionary founding fathers. Meanwhile, a record of Martha Washington's order for new clothes from England shows that she thriftily used only one pair of silk hose to ten of cotton. But the ladies of that period evened things up by wearing silk shoes. . . ."

Answer to Quiz

1. This is one of the few cases where Culbertson advises taking out a double of one no trump. South has two honor tricks and freakish distribution and game seems reasonably sure. He should make a jump suit takeout to three spades.

2. A response of two diamonds on this hand would indicate weakness to partner and he might pass. A jump bid of three diamonds would give him the wrong impression of the suit. One no trump should be bid, even taking a heart stopper, showing the strength of South's hand and encouraging his partner to make another call. If North holds a minimum hand and passes, one no trump will be probably made even if the adversaries can run their hearts.

gether before the war and purged his government of dissident elements."

"There were numerous Nazi spies and Fifth Columnists in Russia at the outbreak of the war," he said. "These were allowed to work until the OGPU (Russian secret police) had the information it needed. Then they were shot."

This source described Stalin as "working in the Kremlin with his eyes open. He is neither over-optimistic nor fearful. The whole outlook of the Russian leader and his lieutenants is one of hard-headed practicality."

The informant said Hopkins had been impressed by communications within Russia, with the generals of three field army groups and their subordinates, all in constant touch with Stalin.

Thus, the informant said, it is entirely possible that an order to withdraw what remains of Marshal Semeon Budyenny's southern armies in the Ukraine east of the Dnieper came from Stalin personally.

Military observers here take a much graver view of the military situation. They feel that the Germans realize the hazards of a winter campaign as well as the Russians and British and that they are making every effort to smash the southern Soviet army and drive through to the Caucasus.

approved Arlington site, "I hope the President stops it."

He termed the present basic laws governing Federal building in the District "a complete mess," and urged that they be recodified.

At a session of the Senate Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, when John Nolen, jr., of the Planning Commission, pointed out that the 35-acre Arlington site would be a mile in circumference, Senator Hugh A. Butler (Republican), of Nebraska, quipped:

"Will they have taxi service to get around it?"

The Senate group approved a bill placing the new $4,750,000 Army Medical Museum and Library on East Capitol Street, east of the Folger Shakespeare Library.

The measure was approved without opposition at a session attended by members of the Fine Arts Commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Already approved by the Senate Military Affairs Committee, the measure calls for a structure covering the area bounded by East Capitol Street, and Third, Fourth and A Streets Southeast.

Closer inspection of future Federal building plans in Washington was promised by committee members who referred to the hasty appropriation of 35 million dollars for the proposed Arlington Army structure.

Senator Francis Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, chairman of the committee, said the group had reviewed the Army museum bill because of the practice of adding new buildings to appropriation bills without consultation with the committee appointed for the purpose.

The Quartermaster Depot site as a potential location for the new War Department offices was suggested to the Senate some time ago as an alternate site by the Park and Planning Commission.

The site is close by the new Navy Department buildings, now under construction.

New Contract Cuts Aluminum Price to U. S.

The Government won a 2 cents per pound cut in the price of aluminum yesterday.

Signing contracts for 52 million dollars worth of new plant facilities with the Aluminum Co. of America, the Defense Plant Corporation obtained a promise from Alcoa's board chairman, Arthur V. Davis, to cut the price of ingot aluminum from 17 cents to 15 cents per pound on all shipments after September 30.

Prices of other types of aluminum will be cut at least as much and, in some cases, more.

The price reduction, officials estimated, will save the Government more than 15 million dollars a year in buying the vitally needed airplane metal.

To Lease Four Plants

The unusual contract between Alcoa and the Government corporation provides for four new plants to be leased to Alcoa. The company agrees to pay 85 per cent of all net profits to the Government as rental for the plants. Defense Plant Corporation will pay for and own the plants with all equipment and facilities, and Alcoa will build and operate them.

The contract calls for an aluminum plant in Arkansas of 400 million pounds capacity and aluminum smelting plants near Massena, N. Y., (150 million pounds capacity); near Bonneville Dam (90 million), and Arkansas (100 million). Exact sites have not been picked.

Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator and Secretary of Commerce, who made the announcement, said he considered the 15 per cent profit margin "a low fee."

Satisfactory Deal

He said he regarded it as a very satisfactory deal from the Government point of view.

Asked if that meant that Alcoa's hold over the aluminum industry would be weakened, Jones advised reporters to draw their own conclusions.

In answer to questions about the status of pending antitrust suits against the giant aluminum firm, Jones said that the contracts with Alcoa had been cleared by the Justice Department and would not have the slightest effect on pending litigation.

Contracts with other manufacturers, Jones said, would provide an additional 280 million pounds of aluminum capacity and would bring the total aluminum capacity of the country to 1,500,000,000 pounds per year when the plants are completed in about 15 months.

Exceeds Rest of World

This capacity, said Jones, would be greater than the aluminum capacity of all the rest of the world put together, including, of course, Germany.

In the contract with Alcoa, providing for operation of the plants by the company under a five-year lease, the Government retains the right to cancel the lease if Alcoa sells aluminum from these plants at "unreasonable profits." The Government will decide what are "unreasonable profits."

Jones said he expected to finance about 100 million pounds additional capacity for the Reynolds Metals Co. at plants to be built in Alabama and the Bonneville Dam area.

Senate Rushes Tax Bill to Cut Loss of Excise Levies

ministration, may come to a head in next week's executive session. Sales-tax adherents were expected to yield to calls for expedition, but will renew their drive with vigor on the next bill.

Apparently assured of inclusion were Administration recommendations for lowering income tax exemptions to $750 for single persons and to $1500 for married. This base broadening might entail some modification in the new House surtax rates between the $5000 and $25,000 income tax brackets.

Several minor operations on House proposed excises were planned and some, such as the proposed billboard tax and the new levy on radio broadcasting time, may be eliminated entirely.

Committee members were also looking over several lucrative sources of excise revenue passed over by the House, such as Treasury proposals for higher tobacco, gasoline and beer taxes which together would raise about 435 million dollars and compensate for some Senate cuts in House taxes.

Treasury recommendations for substitution of its invested capital plan of excess profits taxation, and revival in modified form of House-defeated compulsory joint income tax returns, were considered dead issues.

While generally in favor of the House "optional" plan of taxing excess profits, a strong group within the committee will attempt to eliminate entirely the special 10 per cent House tax on additional profits not subject to excess profits tax under existing law.

More than a score of witnesses, meanwhile, testified at yesterday's hearings, ranging from representatives of business organizations and insurance concerns to sporting goods and music instrument companies hit by House excises.

Laurence Arnold Tanzer, representing the Merchants Association of New York, urged substitution of a manufacturers' excise tax or a general gross income tax deducted at sources from all wages, for what he termed "this hit-or-miss method of imposing a series of miscellaneous taxes."

Both Paul W. Adams, representing the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut, and Tanzer called for reductions in nondefense expenditures.

Ray Murphy, assistant general manager of the Association of Casualty and Surety executives, recommended that large commercial mutual casualty and surety companies be taxed on the same basis as capital stock companies.

35,000 May Strike, Detroit Is Warned

A. F. L. Union Leader Accuses Mayor of C. I. O. Sympathies

By the United Press

Detroit, Aug. 20.—Active support of the A. F. L. bus and street car operators' strike, which has paralyzed the city's municipally-owned transportation system, was pledged tonight by 60,000 teamsters, building tradesmen, hotel and restaurant workers in the metropolitan area.

Frank X. Martel, president of the Wayne County (Detroit) Federation of Labor, said he had received the pledges as he prepared to enter a conference with Federal and State mediators striving to end the strike which forced approximately 600,000 residents of the nation's fourth largest city to become hitch-hikers.

He said the Teamsters' Union, which controls numerous defense plants, had nearly 25,000 members. The Building Trades Council, he said, also had 25,000, and there were 10,000 hotel and restaurant members.

Mayor's Proposals Rejected

Chairman Thomas J. Donahue, of the State labor mediation board, said he would go into an all-night conference "if necessary" to settle the dispute. Earlier, A. F. of L. leaders had threatened to call a strike among 35,000 municipal employes.

Mayor Edward Jeffries offered three proposals for ending the strike but all three were immediately rejected by the A. F. L. They recommended a return to work movement pending outcome of present conferences, a system-wire employe election, and submission of the dispute to an arbitration board.

The strike, called at 4 a. m. today, forced suspension of non-defense production at two Hudson Motor Car Co. plants, affecting 9,000 employes. Hudson officials explained that the walkout occurred with so little warning that some employes were unable to arrange transportation.

About 400,000 factory and office workers were thus forced to find other means of transportation. Some hitchhiked, others walked, and parking lot facilities were overtaxed. Many workers were late but officials of most defense plants said the strike had not interfered with production.

Troops Cross Lines

Other labor developments yesterday included:

At Benton Harbor, Mich., a detachment of Federal troops passed through C. I. O. picket lines to remove patterns needed for national defense from the Benton Harbor Malleable Industries. The plant has been struck since last week.

Production of gauges and other metal products for the Army and Navy was curtailed by a strike at the United States Gauge Co., Sellersville, Pa. An official of the A. F. L. Molders and Foundry Workers, who are seeking a closed shop and increased pay, declared that only a few of the company's 1500 employes remained at work.

A C. I. O. strike at New Haven, Conn., delayed production of some timing devices for bombers. Striking workers claimed that the New Haven Clock Co. had refused to bargain or to consent to the election of a bargaining agent. About 1300 workers were idle.

Two employes of the International Harvester Co. Mine at Benham, Ky., were wounded when their automobile was fired on. The company has been involved in a jurisdictional dispute since April between the Progressive Miners of America (A. F. L.) and the U. M. W. A. (C. I. O.)

Rites Pay Tribute to Late Mission Head

John S. Bennett, late Central Union Mission superintendent, yesterday had his memory enshrined in the stone and mortar of the Mission's $142,000 annex. Its cornerstone was laid.

Those who knew the Mission superintendent best, including James O. Niece, the last man he gave a new start in life before death overtook him in 1937, sat and stood among the piles of bricks and laths at 614 C Street Northwest, for the ceremonies.

"John's approval of this memorial would lie in the fact that it will better serve the kind of men he tried to help," said Mrs. Jean Bennett, the widow, who succeeded to the post of Mission head.

The John S. Bennett Memorial Annex, she said from a bunting-draped platform, will constantly remind Washingtonians that "here was another soul who loved men and knew how to sympathize with them in all their problems, giving his life in service for humanity."

A few minutes later, Mission Board Chairman Edward H. DeGroot, jr., principal speaker, stepped up to the microphone to assure that his friend, John S. Bennett, had for 23 years "served his God faithfully, his fellowmen worthily, and the Nation's Capital notably."

Even during Mr. Bennett's funeral rites, Mr. DeGroot pointed out, Dr. Freeley J. Rohrer, then pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church and Mr. Bennett's minister, had urged starting a drive for a memorial to the superintendent.

Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, Kiwanis Club president, and one of the many civic leaders present, placed Mr. Bennett's Kiwanis pin in a tin box sealed in the cornerstone. Had Mr. Bennett lived, he would have been Kiwanis president. Just before his death, he was serving as vice president.

James O. Niece, for whom Mr. Bennett made it possible to attend dental school here, dropped in newspaper articles on the mission, and Joann Martin, most recent protege of the children's emergency home of the mission, dropped in several coins. Graduate of Central High School, class of 1941, she will enter Garfield Hospital for nurses' training in the fall.

Hearing Today On Sightseeing Bus Proposals

A compromise amendment designed in fairness to Washington sightseeing bus companies and to the thousands of school children who come here annually by chartered bus will be discussed today at a Senate hearing on the District Sightseeing Bus License Act.

Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican), of Ohio, a member of the Senate District Committee, will preside at the hearing which opens at 9:30 a. m. in the Senate District Committee room at the Capitol.

The proposed amendment to the amended bill which has passed the House would allow out-of-town sightseeing busses to operate in Washington not more than five days during any one week of a year and not more than 30 days annually.

Senate advocates of the measure pointed out that such an amendment would allow school children to come here and see historic points of interest aboard the vehicles which brought them to Washington. At the same time, it would not cut into the interests of District transportation companies, which are especially equipped with lecturers and special drivers for sightseeing trips.

Attending the hearing today will be Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech; representatives of the Capital Traction Co., and its organized employes; a representative of the Washington Board of Trade, and one representative of a civic body.

Approval Hinted For Zelditch

Morris Zelditch, former chief of Pennsylvania's public assistance division, will be approved by Commissioners tomorrow as director of local public assistance under the Board of Public Welfare, it was indicated yesterday at the District Building.

Zelditch was proposed for the job by the Welfare Board. He will replace Otto Cass, who becomes superintendent of the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains.

Straw in the Wind

Tale of $1.98 Hat, of a Lady Fair, of Gallantry

By Special Copy Boy Service to The Post

Last Friday Mrs. J. B. Mowbray-Clark, 3725 Macomb Street Northwest, thought she saw the last of her favorite cocoanut straw hat. With the aid of a strong gust of wind the hat had swiftly left her head and soared skyward.

It happened while Mrs. Mowbray-Clark was strolling along Fifteenth Street at H Northwest. Although the hat cost only $1.98, she was very sorry to see it go. And after watching it disappear from sight she sighed. Then she went her way.

The hat, after being considerably jostled about by the wind, came to rest on the ledge of a fifth story window of the Union Trust Building at Fifteenth and H Streets. J. Roy Thompson, jr., an attorney, gazed out from his office just in time to witness the arrival of the $1.98 special.

"It looked as though it had just floated down from the heavens," said Thompson, who placed it on the hat rack in his office and soon wished he hadn't. It seems there are no women employed in Room 525.

So Thompson wrote to The Post saying that if the owner would please call at his office he would be more than glad to turn over the lost hat. Two Post copyboys, in true gallant knight fashion, took upon themselves the task of seeing to its safe return.

Mrs. Mowbray-Clark, who works as a secretary for the Wright Sales Co., at 418 Florida Avenue Northeast, was all set to buy a new hat, but yesterday was delivered of the necessity. She was truly grateful to the ambassadors of goodwill, and also to J. Roy Thompson.

She will go on wearing her old favorite with new zeal.

Haste Makes Waste

President Roosevelt has earned the thanks of Washingtonians of many future generations by scotching the War Department's plan to erect an unsightly building between Arlington Cemetery and the Potomac. Not even the present emergency would justify the erection of a permanent building with 36 acres of roof in that area. Mr. Roosevelt is certainly as eager as anyone else to have the War Department properly housed, but he courageously refuses to cast all esthetic considerations aside to hasten that undertaking.

Arlington County, too, should be delighted that the blunder sponsored by the War Department has been avoided. In effect that county is a part of the Nation's Capital and the ties which link it to Washington will undoubtedly become closer as Federal building extends to the south shore of the Potomac. When that development comes, however, it ought to be in keeping with the character of the Capital. Use of Arlington land for Federal buildings would have gotten off to a very poor start if the War Department had been allowed to erect a monstrosity on the site of the old experimental farm.

There can be little doubt that the department will find a satisfactory solution to its problem now that its efforts have been redirected by the White House. Indeed, acceptable plans might now be in hand if the department had taken the trouble of consulting the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission before rushing to Congress with a project wholly inappropriate for construction anywhere in the Capital area. Congress, too, might have saved valuable time by rejecting the proposal when its undesirability was clearly shown. Now Congress will doubtless be asked to reconsider its hasty decision so that work on a properly planned War Department building may go forward. Even in an emergency reckless planning and undue haste still make waste.

Propaganda And Fact

It cannot be doubted that one purpose which Adolf Hitler had in mind when he launched his attack on Soviet Russia last June was to divide and confuse public opinion in nonbelligerent countries, particularly the United States. By posing as the defender of Christian civilization against the Bolsheviks he hoped to smash the powerful coalition that was coming into being against the Third Reich. And there can be no doubt that among certain elements of our population his ruse succeeded. Fortunately, the great majority of Americans are well aware of the realities of the situation. While regarding communism with the same abhorrence as naziism, they recognize, as Associate Justice Frank Murphy of the United States Supreme Court pointed out in an address to the Knights of Columbus meeting in Atlantic City Tuesday, that naziism constitutes "by far the greater menace to free nations and free institutions."

Mr. Justice Murphy made it very clear how utterly fraudulent are the Nazi claims that the war on Russia is a crusade. For, from the very beginning, Hitler and his cohorts have proved themselves enemies of religion. Jews, Protestants and Catholics have been mercilessly persecuted. Speaking as a Catholic to Catholics, Mr. Justice Murphy reminded his listeners that Nazi treatment of the Catholic Church in Germany is "a picture of systematic and sustained endeavor to drive a wedge between the Catholics of Germany and their traditional faith." "It is a picture," he said, "of the closing of churches, monasteries, convents and schools on invented accusations and flimsy pretexts; of the regimentation of Catholic youth and the abolition of their youth organizations; of the elimination of Catholic Action societies and publishing houses, the surveillance and supervision of priests, and the destruction of business establishments through boycotts and blacklists. It is a picture of stealthy and demoralizing persecution."

There is no escape from Justice Murphy's conclusion that the "great and immediate threat to our position and standing as a great nation . . . is Nazi Germany, with its inordinate ambitions, its hated philosophy and its superb military organization." "In the present circumstances," he said, "any nation resisting the might and aggression of Nazi Germany is, whether intentionally or not, advancing our interest as well as its own." And that, indeed, is the situation in a nutshell.

Battle Of Production

Out of the current criticism of our preparedness efforts one conclusion is inescapable: there is widespread dissatisfaction over the rate of progress we are making. Complaints are not confined to any one group or any one category of officials. Nor do they represent the carping of habitual faultfinders. On the contrary, Americans in increasing numbers are speaking candidly of our failure as a Nation to come quickly to grips with our gigantic problem of arming to resist the menace of the Nazi aggression.

The uneasy feeling of President Roosevelt was clearly revealed in his press conference on Tuesday. By quoting from Lincoln he complained that the people have not buckled down to the "hard, tough fighting" that will be necessary to bring the war to a successful close. In effect, the President was appealing to the people for greater efforts and more sacrifices in behalf of defense and aid to the nations actually fighting Hitlerism. But the people are also appealing to the President to make the defense program more effective. The Gallup Poll of yesterday shows that 43 per cent of those interviewed are dissatisfied with the output of war materials to date as against 39 per cent who are satisfied. Complaints as to the shortage of equipment for training our new citizen Army are both numerous and pointed. Senator Byrd considers the lag in defense production to be so serious that he has undertaken an expose of the facts to stimulate administrative officials to action.

The plain fact is that the President believes the people are not sufficiently aroused by the world crisis and the people believe that the Administration has not moved fast enough in turning out machines of war. Both viewpoints appear to be sustained by the facts. The Administration has launched a truly gigantic armament program, but it has not done all that could be done to hasten the production of finished weapons. This unsatisfactory record is important, of course, only as it points to the way which should be taken in the future. Fortunately, a study of the defense organization in Washington is already well advanced under the able direction of Judge Rosenman.

We have set our hand, as Senator Byrd pointed out, to a truly gigantic task. Only the most unified and efficient organization can properly direct the enormous undertaking of supplying ourselves and other democratic countries with the sinews of modern war. Our immediate job is to get production and more production. The future of the Nation as well as the standing of the Administration in the cold light of history is bound up with its success or failure in turning out enough weapons to halt the spreading menace of the Nazi revolution. Up to now the President has relied upon capable men to work a miracle without the necessary authority or efficiency of organization. Disappointment in the results of the armament program was inevitable because of the conflicts among overlapping agencies. The time has come to strip the defense organization of every handicap that has led to confusion and delay.

Without even waiting for these prospective changes, the President could immediately bring the seriousness of the situation home to the people by placing every defense plant on a full-week working basis. It is useless to pretend that we are making an "all-out" effort when some defense plants stand idle from Friday to Monday. Many defense workers are now on a six-day basis, but halfway measures are not enough. Certainly we ought to be getting maximum production out of present plants before sanctioning the use of strategic materials for the construction of new plants. Loss of time from strikes also continues to be a critical problem. Yesterday, for example, 27 strikes caused a loss of 19,555 man-days on War Department orders alone.

Despite all our talk about "all-out" defense, the country has not yet settled down to the job with the vigor and determination of which it is capable. In many instances the people do not realize the gravity of the crisis because they have not been asked to share in the necessary sacrifices. Skillful leadership is needed to swing the program into the faster tempo which officials as well as the people demand. For that leadership the Nation looks to the President. And it expects official Washington to point the way to whatever "hard, tough fighting" is necessary to win the battle of production.

Not Enough Planes

The War and Navy Departments may not agree, but it seems to us that Senator Byrd has rendered the country a distinct service by revealing the shortcomings of our aircraft production program. In the past, for military reasons, only production totals were made public. These could mean much or little, depending on how many planes of each type were produced. Early this month, for example, it was announced with some pride that 1460 military planes were completed in July. Senator Byrd discloses, however, that half of these were trainers. Moreover, he claims—with apparent authority—that of some 700 combat planes produced, there were only 300 bombers of all kinds, and that production of long-range bombers does not exceed 60 per month.

These totals, if accurate, clearly show the tremendous job ahead before we can even begin to approach German production, now reported to be from four to six times greater than ours. Since the first of the year the American aircraft industry has acquired some $2,250,000,000 worth of orders, making its total backlog, as of July 1, $5,136,759,573. The industry has expanded phenomenally, achieving technical wonders in its effort to acquire more plant capacity. But obviously an air fleet of 50,000 planes, which the President called for 15 months ago, is out of the question in the immediate future. If this knowledge affords comfort to the Germans, let them make the most of it. From the defense standpoint it is far more important that the American public know now how far away we are from air parity—providing the news spurs us on to greater appreciation of what total defense really means.

Drive In The North

While the most spectacular gains achieved by the Nazis in the ninth week of the war in Russia are those which they have made in the south, where a large part of the area west of the Dnieper is now in their hands, they have also made progress in the north. Leningrad is not yet menaced as is Odessa. But unless the Red army succeeds in halting the German-Finnish drive which is again acquiring momentum, the loss of Russia's former capital, second city and great industrial center may be expected. Some days ago the Russian high command admitted that the Red forces had evacuated Kingisepp, which is not more than 70 miles from Leningrad. The city of Novgorod, 100 miles to the southeast, is also menaced, but the terrain in that region is not particularly favorable for blitz tactics.

One reason for the renewed efforts by the Nazis to capture Leningrad is that within a relatively few weeks the weather in north Russia is likely to check large-scale operations and rapid movement. Apparently they are trying to achieve a smashing victory in the Leningrad sector before snow flies. Such a victory might also compel a tactical withdrawal of the Russian forces which appear to have suffered another severe blow on the central front near Tomel. The central theater is still the most important on the far-flung Russian front.

Claims are being made by the Russians that the bulk of Marshal Budyenny's forces in the Ukraine have successfully retreated across the Dnieper. If that is true (it is denied by the Germans) the very considerable territorial gains made by the Nazis in their great drive into the Ukraine need not be conclusive. Now as at all times since the struggle in Russia began victory for the Germans can be achieved only through the destruction of the Red army. And that victory has by no means been won.

Falcon Detachment

The Army Signal Corps School at Fort Monmouth, N. J., is experimenting with some of the toughest draftees in the service. They are being taught to kill on sight and, believe it or not, to lug their victims back to headquarters. The draftees, we might point out, are peregrine falcons. The theory apparently is that the birds—hawks to the layman—are natural killers and can be trained to destroy enemy carrier pigeons, retrieving the pigeons along with the messages they bear. This should be a great help, of course, and there is even talk of equipping the falcons with razor-sharp knives so that they can attack enemy parachutists or at least sever the cords that hold them up. At any rate, several hundred more falcons are reportedly about to be inducted into the service following preliminary trials, and will doubtless be permitted to skip the customary hardening-up period.

The only trouble with the recruits seems to be the little matter of properly identifying their prey. What's to prevent them from tearing to pieces pigeon members of their own corps? The R. A. F. has become so embittered over losing carrier pigeons on urgent business—victims of wild British hawks—that raiding parties, sanctioned by the Air Ministry, have been organized to destroy the culprits. We don't know whether this news will be disquieting to the Signal Corps; presumably its trained hawks will be above that sort of indiscriminate butchery. But it only goes to show that lack of education in a hawk can be a dangerous thing.

CHERRY TREES

My cherry trees bear fruitage now
On every firm uplifted bough—
A peasant woman's strong brown arm
So lifts to hold her child from harm.
In dew-drenched grass, my cherry trees
Wear green skirts bound about their knees;
Their bare brown feet press deep in earth;
They smile at toil and welcome birth,
And pity the willow trees by the wall
Who bear no weight of fruit at all.

No Profiteering

Congress has finally enacted legislation to hold draftees 18 months longer in the armed forces of the United States. In view of the grave danger that threatens the country, it is well that this has been done. A democracy not only confers benefits upon its citizens, it imposes responsibilities also. In the interest of the national safety, it may even require sacrifice of them. So it is well that these young men and boys who have been selected should accept their responsibility and make the sacrifice that is required of them.

What is not so well is that the responsibility and the sacrifice should be required of so small a part of the public. The benefits of a democratic form of government are shared by all. Why should the sacrifices involved be demanded of so few? What are taxes compared with 2½ of the best years of one's life and the possibility that there may in addition be requirement for the supreme sacrifice?

Many persons would welcome the opportunity to serve to the extent of their ability if their country requested this of them. It is not inconceivable that a people united by some form of universal national service might develop a stronger love for democracy and achieve a nearer approach to true democracy than one composed largely of those who take its fruits but make no contribution in return.

Whatever the attitude with regard to universal national service, there is one thing that should be axiomatic at this time. When we are demanding sacrifice from part of the youth of the country for the protection of all, would it not be well to see that those who are exempt from this sacrifice are not allowed to profit from the national emergency? Why should any group or special interest whatsoever be permitted to make personal capital out of the present situation?

Secret Treaties

Walter Lippmann, in his article in your paper of August 16, is either very naive or deliberately misleading. Commenting on the famous ocean conference and the eight points, he says there can be no possibility of any secret treaties this time as there was in 1917, because there isn't anybody to have secret treaties with. In other words, England has got to be honest with us this time because she hasn't any chance to be dishonest.

No chance for secret treaties? What about Russia? Isn't Stalin going to require some sort of payment for keeping the fight going while his men are being slaughtered by the tens of thousands? Doesn't he come in for some compensation? And what has Russia been promised?

It would no doubt be very comforting to Finland, Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia if they could be convinced there were no secret understandings between the great democracies of Russia and England as to the disposal of those little countries. England handed Czecho-Slovakia over to Hitler. Would she have any compunction about handing the little Baltic countries to Stalin.

The picture of our own democracy joining hands with Stalin and Churchill in a game of power politics to control the world is not a pretty one, and all of Mr. Lippmann's skillfuly phrased sophistries cannot conceal its ugliness.

For World Federation

To enforce the eight points of Roosevelt-Churchill or the 14 of Woodrow Wilson we need a world federation of all nations that will join on a democratic basis into a United States of the World. The world chairman or moderator should have very limited powers. The world congress, or court, of representatives and senators, should make prompt decisions as to aggressor-nations and promptly enforce them by means of total boycotts and embargoes—as the League promised to do but didn't.

In our own federal union—a perfect and proven working model for the world—the very same races and peoples with the self-same languages, traditions and religions who now war in Europe, Asia and Africa, live in peace because the militia of all our 48 States are united in one federal government which removes all causes of war and fears of invasion of any State by any other. The very same method would work with all nation-states of the world—in time—if we work for that one practical ideal as hard as we do for the slaughter of millions—which wholesale murder seems necessary every few decades precisely because, as yet, we have had only political and economic anarchy—"each for himself, and the devil takes all." To insure wisdom in voting for such representatives from each nation-state and to stimulate education in all backward countries, the self-determining peoples of all now-subject nations should—following the American method—become naturalized internationally by passing tests in literacy (in their own language) and world geography, history, civics, economics, etc.

The collapse of the League doesn't prove that all such attempts at world union must fail, any more than the failure of the first attempt at a Panama Canal—under European sponsorship—prevented the very second attempt—under American leadership—from proving a complete success. Likewise, America should lead the world—NOW—in a truly democratic federation—for lasting "total peace."

The troubles in the loose league-form of our original 13 colonies were largely solved by the much closer federation of the larger, more widely separated 48 States with one monetary system (such as the U. S. of the World should have). Another reason the League failed was because it was tied up with the Versailles Treaty, and because we did not join to help enforce Woodrow Wilson's 14 points—and prevent World War the Second.

We need free immigration between all nation-states, as between our own (with an International Labor Relations Board governing wages and hours) removal of all prohibitive tariffs, free use of all land-and-water ways by all nation-states—and all other American methods that have removed causes and fears of wars between our 48 States composed of all kinds of races and peoples. Then no one nation-state could dominate any other. The International Congress would settle all differences and save millions of lives and billions of dollars to all nation-states—including our own.

All nation-states should partly disarm, but pool their reduced armies and navies into one international police, as our own States do their militia, to enforce world court decisions if all other means fail—which would likely be unnecessary.

Such a democratic world federation is no more impossible than scores of other advances in science and sociology which were also solemnly pronounced "impossible" by so-called "experts" not long before they became practical working realities. "For lack of (such) vision, the people perish"—by millions. All else has failed. But—most important of all: to unite as many nations as possible against dictatorships and insure the defeat of Hitlerism everywhere, we most urgently need such a federal union—AT ONCE.

Pooling Resources

It cannot be stressed too strongly that Hitler has achieved his successes through the coordinated planning of grand politics, diplomacy, undermining intrigue, and the careful work of the German General Staff. Industry has been integrated with the military, the two-for-a-nickel Quislings with the Geopolitical Institute. There is no master mind in Germany. Certainly this powerful machine is not the creation of the neurotic Hitler. Nor is there any one directing military genius, such as Ludendorff in the last war. The German machine is almost automatic in that it represents the pooling of the intelligence of the Reich to the chosen goal—world mastery. No person, not even Hitler, is indispensable to it. It operates because each part knows its job and its place in the whole.

To beat Hitler, the United States, Great Britain, and Russia must likewise pool their intellectual resources as well as their military and industrial strength. They must plan politically as well as militarily. The V campaign, the gradual building up of the R. A. F. by the combined efforts of British and American labor and industrial management, the Roosevelt-Churchill conference, the forthcoming industrial and military conference which Stalin has called, taken together furnish the beginnings for the necessary over-all planning.

No factor can be overlooked: e. g., the Far Eastern situation, the threat to Latin America if Germany gets the French fleet and Dakar, the morale of the German workers who opposed Hitler's rise till the Conservatives sold them out. Nor can the unwillingness of the American people to engage in the continental phase of the war be pushed down.

But thoroughgoing, long-range planning is necessary to the task. Otherwise Hitler will win—or to defeat him a tremendous A. E. F. on at least two continents will have to be resorted to. We must demand of our leaders intelligence worthy of the courage of the R. A. F. and the Red army.

Wise Prophets

I have just read the column by Westbrook Pegler in the Sunday Post under the caption of "The Arrogant Mr. Henderson," mentioning an administration that is notoriously sympathetic with communism. I agree with Pegler 100 per cent. May I state that I am a real red-blooded American, and a son of the pioneers, and my prayer is "May God give us more Westbrook Peglers and Martin Dieses, and feel that the day will come when people will look back and up to such men and hail them as wise prophets, as in the case of Billy Mitchell who received no honor until it was too late.

We have taken a mighty big order on promises, when we stop to think that men in our own defense industry are deprived of jobs unless they bow to some organization which is (from all indications) controlled by the same elements we are so desirous to destroy. In fact our whole country seems to be taking on an entirely new and strange color.

The 202

If ever a shameful thing was done by members of a lawmaking body it occurred the other day when the draft extension bill was under consideration—202 to 203! If we did not live in a world where the fires of war are steadily approaching us there might be some justification for the votes of the 202.

The Post Impressionist

Domestication

Dear Post:

I don't know who writes the Post Impressionist column, but I have some recently acquired impressions.

This seems to be the debunking age. Consider, for instance, the popular notion that old dogs cannot learn new tricks. There's nothing to it. My personal experience proves it.

I have just finished a two-month course in home economics. I graduate tomorrow, when my wife returns after an absence of eight weeks.

I do not expect to see any "cum laude" on my diploma. In fact, I'll not receive any diploma. But I'll graduate, and I'll be as certain of definite new achievement in education and as elated over the passing of another of life's milestones as are most graduates, and I think that I have learned more than have many graduates during my course. I might check up a little short on theory, but as to preparation for the practical things of life from here on I feel that my course has been a success.

Two months ago an emergency in the home, in a distant city, from which my wife married me more than 35 years ago caused her to return there on three hours' notice. It is the first time since I took her away from that home that she has been away from ours for that length of time. So our home here in Washington was left to me exactly "as was."

It has remained more or less that way in most outward respects from that day in June to this one in August, but in the meantime I have learned a number of things, most of which were outside my former more limited sphere of action and information.

I have learned that the place does not have to be swept or dusted, which fact I have suspected for years and, at times, have suggested to my wife. It can be left alone. But if it is not given some attention one begins to notice the fact eventually. At first it is not especially apparent, but after a couple of weeks or so, when the dirt and fluffy little miniature tumble-weeds have accumulated sufficiently to blow about the floors in gobs and drift into the corners like winter's snow, one realizes, if he is even semi-dirt-conscious, that floors and book shelves and tables and desks do not clean themselves automatically. Somebody has to do something about it.

I have learned that one does not have to wash dishes or to let them accumulate unwashed until the kitchen sags with the weight, but if he does not do one or the other it is because he eats his meals away from home.

I have learned that one does not have to wind the clocks. But if he does not he discovers that clocks at home, like the watch in his pocket, just naturally quit unless they receive some attention. A good way to acquire this knowledge is to discover, some morning, that it is two hours later than you thought and to have to explain it at the office.

I have learned something about still another phase of housekeeping technique, the importance of which a man is likely to underestimate if he ever gives it any thought at all. One may think, at first, that he is not going to do anything about the bathroom "facilities," except to use them as usual. But he is. They have a way of proclaiming, eventually, and loudly, that they are accustomed to being given some attention occasionally. What he does about it in deference to the proclamation may not be what his wife would do, but he WILL do SOMETHING—or move out.

I have learned something about current literature in its relation to housekeeping. One may think he is going to keep right on throwing his newspapers and magazines down where he reads them, according to custom so well established that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary thereof. But eventually he finds that he must read them somewhere else, because ingress and egress, with respect to the regular location, are barred by the accumulation.

I have learned something about the extravagant and inconsiderate habits of mice (not to mention men) when left to their own devices. One may have the idea, based on previous experience possibly covering decades, that the baiting and setting of mousetraps is too incidental and frivolous a matter to become the responsibility of a real he man. But he pays attention when he discovers that the little rascals have been holding nigh carnival on the dining table both day and night, eating out of the tablecloth the ice cream, coffee, syrup or other tasty bits that he has spilled from time to time, and that he is going to have some expensive table linen replacements to pay for.

I have learned, also, that "business is business" in its relation to the home as well as to the office. One may have had the idea that public utility companies put the little reference on their monthly bills about the advantage of prompt payment, just to suggest that there's no special hurry about taking care of these fixed and regular items in the family expense account; but when he finds that he must dig up an additional 10 per cent or some such amount to keep the service in effect, or do without it until he can have it reestablished, he realizes that somebody is supposed to take notice of these dates and act accordingly, and that heretofore somebody has.

Such are some of the practical little things I have picked up in the course in which I have been majoring for the last two months.

To any married man who lives, normally, in a well-regulated household and wonders what his wife does with her time, my suggestion is: try to get along without her and let the place run itself for two months.

You'll find out.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Our Leaders

WHEN the President quotes Lincoln's remark that the people "have got the idea into their heads that we are going to get out of this fix somehow by strategy," he ought not to forget that the ideas the people get into their heads about this fix they get from their responsible leaders. They get them from the words and acts of the President, his spokesmen in Congress, and his appointees. They get them from the words and acts of the Republican opposition. If the people do not realize the gravity of the fix they are in, it is because the President has made them feel that he was himself trying to get out of the fix by clever strategy and brilliant tactics, and because the Republican organization in Congress has been trying by its strategy and tactics to win the next election.

LIPPMANN

In a crisis of this sort the state of mind of the people is the direct reflection of the quality of their responsible leaders. The people themselves cannot possibly lead themselves by holding mass meetings, distributing postcards and taking Gallup polls. They must be led. They expect to be led, and if they do not find leaders who have that high seriousness which the occasion demands, they will accept leaders who pander to and seek to profit by the universal human weakness for taking, whenever possible, the cheap and easy way.

AN appallingly dangerous and demoralizing and humiliating situation has developed in Congress during the past fortnight. It is due to the fact that in default of a high seriousness in the President's leadership of the people, the Republican opposition in Congress has decided it was free to play partisan politics, even at the risk of disorganizing the Army, repudiating its commander, demoralizing the people, and shattering the influence of the United States throughout the world. The decision of the Republican organization to make a partisan issue of the Army extension bill was in the last degree reckless. But the politicians would never have dared to gamble so recklessly with the fate of the country if from the other side, from the President himself, the people had been treated as grown men and women who are faced with a tremendous ordeal in which they must rise far above their normal selves.

Mr. Roosevelt himself has not dealt with the people as Lincoln dealt with Mrs. Livermore. For while he has repeatedly made addresses which describe truthfully, profoundly, and eloquently the gravity of our position, invariably these utterances have been punctuated and deflated by subsequent smart-alecisms and wisecracks. Listening to Mr. Roosevelt has been like listening to a radio station from which the announcer gives forth epoch-making news and appeals to patriotism interspersed with advertisements for soft mattresses and efficient laxatives.

IT IS not necessary, or remotely desirable, that the leader of a people in a crisis like this should be always grim, solemn, and fanatic. It is a relief, when one thinks of the sulphurous gloom of Hitler, to think of a Churchill or a Roosevelt and be reminded, by their gusto and their buoyancy, of the decencies of life. But it is essential that the greatest matters, those involving the fate of the Nation, should not be reduced to triviality by trivial comment, or, worse still, cheapened by wisecracks.

IT IS a solemn and a heavy, not a light and clever, task to summon a people from their ordinary ways of life to face one among the few very greatest moments in the history of mankind. Of course it is difficult. Of course millions will listen to and prefer to believe those who tell them they need not rouse themselves, and that all will be well if only they continue to do all the pleasant and profitable and comfortable things they would like best to do. Of course, the contest is hard and the debating is fierce, and the polls of opinion uncertain: the President must ask the people to give up comfort and ease, personal ambition and private profit, and be ready, it may be, for blood and tears; his political opponents need only tell the people to keep their comforts, to hug their private ambitions and pursue their private profit, to sit in safety and they will be forever safe.

What has the President to offer the people in return for the sacrifices they are called upon to make? Only their duty done, their country's future, the honor and the glory of being fit to stand with those who made the Nation and preserved it. It is easier for a politician to tell the boys to go home, to tell their mothers their sons need never be in danger, to tell everyone that there is no need to go short of gasoline or to endure the incredible suffering of not having silk stockings and a new automobile. Of course it is harder to ask people to take the hard way than it is to tell them they can safely and profitably take the easy way.

BUT it has to be done. Washington had to do it, Lincoln had to do it, Churchill has had to do it, Roosevelt has to do it. The world is on fire. The alarm has to be rung and kept ringing, first and without stopping by the President, until the fire is put out. However much pleasanter it might be to do so, the American people cannot sleep through that fire, or they too will be trapped in the flames.

Imaginary Dialogues

Joe—So you're Harry Hopkins! Fancy seeing you here in the Kremlin!

Harry—You're no more surprised than I am, Joe.

Joe—It's a small world, isn't it?

Harry—That's a trite statement.

Joe—Well, there are moments when I would rather be trite than be premier.

Harry—Are you sure I am not intruding here?

Joe—Of course I am. I'm always glad to see a fellow Democrat.

Harry—This is no time for joking.

Joe—If you think I'm joking you're crazy!

• • • •

Harry—I assume you know what I'm here for.

Joe—There are so many strangers around me these days that I am a little confused. I guess you are here to discuss OUR position.

Harry—You mean YOUR position.

Joe—It's okay either way.

• • • •

Harry—I have come to find out the actual situation with your armies at the front.

Joe—If you find out let me know.

Harry—Your armies seem to be doing well if I can believe your communiques.

Joe—If you believe 'em, I can.

• • • •

Harry—I wish I knew which were right, your communiques or Hitler's.

Joe—There are times when I feel the same way. I think Russia is doing better than anybody expected.

Harry—Yes, but just what did you expect?

Joe—Let's not get too technical.

• • • •

Harry—My President sent me here to get a close-up picture and make a reliable report on how things stand.

Joe—Well, no matter how bad my position seems to him I will double it in spades.

Harry—He wants facts, Joe.

Joe—Now don't try to tell me that after all these years Mr. Roosevelt is going in for facts!

Harry—Roosevelt is a different man today.

Joe—Who isn't?

• • • •

Harry—One purpose of my visit here is to find out just what you need from America.

Joe—If you have anything I don't need name it. I'll take anything but fountain pens and ink.

Harry—What not pens and ink?

Joe—Boy, the trouble they got me into!

• • • •

Harry—How are you fixed for oil and gas?

Joe—Well, I haven't had to close the pumping stations at 7 p. m. yet.

• • • •

Harry—What kind of bombers do you need most?

Joe—Here I am in the worst position of my life and you talk like I am doing some weekend shopping!

• • • •

Harry—Don't be so irritable, Joe. We want to do all we can to aid you in this war.

Joe—Okay, comrade!

Harry—Not so loud. I still can't get used to it.

"One day last week Eliza Kindig was hoeing in his garden. The garden adjoins the pasture where John Lee's milk cow roams. Army Goes 'Society,' Buys Dancing Shoes

Boston, Aug. 20 (AP).—Keeping abreast of fashion, the United States Army for the first time soon will have a low shoe, of a new design, a tan blucher oxford suitable for off-duty wear on the dance floor and in the drawing room.

The Quartermaster Depot here announced today the distribution of invitations for bids for 1,280,000 pairs of the dressy shoes.

Thus far the Army has bought special oxfords in small quantities for fliers. Now all soldiers are to have low-cut shoes.

More Nazi Tourists

Fifth Columnists Invade North

ALTHOUGH Hitler's Fifth Column has long been active in Iceland and Greenland, his plans there have been known to but few.

But despite the American and British activities there are still strong forces of Fifth Columnists actively engaged in disseminating Nazi propaganda and principles.

One of Iceland's most noted personages is the sculptor, Gudmundur Einarsson. He is also considered one of the best authorities on Greenland and Iceland. A few days before the outbreak of war Einarsson received a visitor from Germany, the well-known scientist, Prof. Paul Burckhardt, who had just arrived in Reykjavik with a large German expedition. It was Burckhardt's second visit to Iceland, for he had visited both Iceland and Greenland once before in the company of Prof. Alfred Wegner, the famous German geologist.

Einarsson was extremely flattered by this attention, especially since Burckhardt brought greetings from the German Ministry of Culture, and informed the sculptor that the Nordic League of Luebeck, an organization under the patronage of Alfred Rosenberg, Hitler's ideological adviser, was prepared to arrange for a large exhibition of Einarsson's work in Germany. The Icelander celebrated the news by tendering a dinner in honor of the cultural exchange between Germany and Iceland and it was at this affair that Burckhardt was able to obtain all the necessary social contacts to fulfill his mission.

BURCKHARDT and his expedition remained in Iceland for six months and during this time he did not limit himself to the consolidation of social contacts only. On the contrary, he planned a careful registration of all the industrial possibilities and sources of raw materials in the country. He covered the island from one end to the other and took with him a complete plan of every relevant airplane base and landing field. This list was completed by innumerable weather charts with exhaustive data about weather conditions in Iceland.

I happen to know that the entire expedition was paid for by check drawn against the account of the foreign section of the SS (Storm Troopers) in a bank at Copenhagen. And Burckhardt was in possession of a document which had been signed by Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler himself which stated that his luggage was not to be examined because of his official position in the SS (his position in the Gestapo corresponded to that of a major in the army) and because he was traveling on an official mission for the Gestapo. Burckhardt always produced this authorization as a trump card in order to complete the impression of importance he had made on his newly found friends in Reykjavik.

Burckhardt returned to Germany where he prepared a report of several hundred pages on the results of his trip, which he personally submitted to Himmler and Ribbentrop. At Himmler's suggestion he also prepared a manuscript called, "My Trip Through Iceland," which was published by a Berlin book house specializing in travel and adventure stories. In this book he described in an entertaining and conversational style his experiences as a tourist in Iceland and characterized the island as "the paradise of Nordic culture." A similar book by him had been published the previous year on Greenland.

THE GESTAPO always placed great value on such publications by its agents at the completion of their expeditions since it provided them with an excellent alibi and also assured them of a hearty welcome should they be sent back again by the Nazis to continue their activities. The since then notorious Dr. Manfred Zapp, for example, before he was transferred to the United States, had brought out such publications about South Africa and other places where he had been active.

I received reports from Germany that Burckhardt had set up headquarters in Prince Albrecht Street in Berlin for a Greenland-Iceland branch of the foreign section of the SS of which he had been made director and that he was also the expert on these countries for Ribbentrop. He still maintains his connections with Iceland and Greenland via Sweden.

BEFORE the occupation of Iceland by England and the United States, Einarsson, as well as a whole group of young Icelanders who were influenced by Burckhardt, went to Germany where they attended the SS Leadership School which was situated on Lake Walchen next to Heinrich Himmler's villa. Einarsson worked out every possible means for effecting German-Nordic exchanges with the Nordic League of Luebeck. He organized student exchanges between Berlin and Reykjavik and is now back in Iceland. Einarsson created centers of support for Himmler's Gestapo in Greenland and Iceland as a result of which Burckhardt, in his long report to Himmler, asserted that all landing fields in these countries were in reliable hands.

Burckhardt was also given the additional assignment of determining whether a regular air-line between Berlin-Bergen-Iceland and Germany-Norway-Greenland could be set up. All the plans for an air service between Germany-Norway- Iceland- Newfoundland-United States were to have been put into operation by him but were blocked at the last minute by the democratic intervention.

ICELAND has built up her own merchant marine, so that now most of her foreign trade is carried on her own ships. The Iceland steamship company has regular routes to Scandinavia, Great Britain, Greenland and America. Germany must establish a regular service from Iceland to the United States. Iceland owned coastal boats call at all ports—Iceland's fleet would be a great asset in case of a war in the Arctic Ocean.

There can be no doubt that Iceland and Greenland would have been extremely advantageous as Nazi bases against the United States and England, even though the Nazis, through the Nordic League of Luebeck, tried to play this factor down. Even today, however, the Icelanders still relate with horror the story of the pirate, Joergen Joergensen, who, on June 25, 1009, attempted a daring coup against Iceland. He threw the Icelandic administration in jail and set himself up at the head of a pirate regime which stayed in power for two months, until is was ousted by England. Joergensen found Iceland an excellent base for his piratical operations.

During the war of 1914-1918, although Iceland officially belonged to Denmark, the British consul was still the most important personage in the country. And while Denmark hungered and Norway suffered severely, ships continued to arrive regularly from the United States in Iceland, just as they do today.

THE Scandinavian countries are not too happy over the occupation of Iceland by Britain and the United States and the handing over of Greenland to America by the Danish Minister, Henrik de Kauffman. In one way, of course, they are happy that Hitler is thereby excluded, but on the other hand they too have always considered Iceland and Greenland as part of a Nordic Union. The independence of Iceland and the replacement of the Danish King by the new president, Sven Bjoerzon, former Icelandic Ambassador to Denmark, has occasioned much bad feeling.

However, Iceland and Greenland are orientating themselves more and more toward the United States. In the Scandinavian countries the great subject under discussion today is that Iceland must decide in the course of this war whether it is to belong to the Western Hemisphere or to northern Europe. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the famous polar explorer, who is also an adviser to President Roosevelt and the Iceland expert for the State Department in Washington, was severely criticized in Sweden for calling Iceland "the first American republic" in his latest book.

Iceland's geographic isolation in the Arctic Circle and its subordination to the power politics of the great powers long ago decided its fate. The whole of Iceland has a population smaller than that of an average American town—120,000 inhabitants. This small country, which has the oldest parliament and the oldest democracy in the world, is grateful for the protection which has now been given her by Britain and America.

IN FACT, Icelanders with whom I have been in contact, have said to me, "we are happy that all the good will that formerly was directed to the Scandinavian countries is now aimed at us. After all, we are the most peace-loving nation in the world. In 1000 years we have never had an army and there has never been any Icelandic soldiers. Our relations with the United States go back to ancient times, for in the year 1000 it was an Icelander, Leif Ericksson, who first discovered America. Now the American Vikings have come to discover Iceland!"

And in Greenland the Nazis have never been strangers. Germany's Lindbergh, Wolfgang von Gronau, made three flights across Greenland in 1929, 1930 and 1931. Each time he flew via Iceland and Greenland to Canada—the natural route for an invasion of the United States from Europe.

The most thorough survey of Greenland was made by Germany's greatest geologist, Alfred Wegner. For five years a department head of the Nazi coast guard and during the last World War a member of the Prussian Aeronautical Institute, Wegner established meteorological stations on the west and east coasts of Greenland and on top of the icecap, which made weather forecasts available to the Nazis and permitted them to bomb Britain mercilessly.

AFTER Greenland went off the air last summer and weather broadcasts could no longer be obtained, the Nazis made one unsuccessful effort to do something about it. Up to Greenland sailed a Norwegian vessel, ostensibly a supply boat come to provision some Norwegian natural scientists who really were there. But it was found that the men aboard this "Quisling-ship" were Nazi radio experts with shortwave sets. The Greenland government seized the ship and interned the Nazis.

In addition, Greenland provides the only known commercial supply in the world of cryolite, a flux used in the production of aluminum from bauxite, and for years before starting this war, the Reich imported huge quantities of cryolite from the island. Now the United States and Canada are absorbing the entire output of the cryolite mines.

Hitler has lost his battles for Iceland and Greenland.

Afghans Will Fight

Wait British Move

(Editors Note: There are increasing indications that a British military move in central Asia may be imminent. Should Britain occupy Iran (Persia), as many believe is planned, neighboring Afghanistan probably would share the same fate. In the following exclusive dispatch a United Press expert describes the situation in this little-known country on the "Roof of the World."

By Ferdinand C. M. Jahn
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Ancient Khyber Pass of bloody fame, over which the British and Afghans have fought for a century and where the "Fakir of Ipi's" guerrillas still harass the British, is likely to spring into front page news again soon.

Britain's renewed and sterner warning to Iran (Persia) to get rid of German nationals flooding the country was generally understood to foreshadow British military action in central Asia, which doubtless would include Afghanistan, as conditions there are similar to those in Iran. Bordering the Indian Empire, Afghanistan in enemy hands would be a grave threat to Britain.

Numbers of German "travelers" and "sportsmen" have been reported in Afghanistan recently and Japan has set up elaborate diplomatic representation there.

If the Russians are forced to retire behind the Urals and Britain wants to send them support, the shortest route would lie across Afghanistan. From Peshawar, India, a railroad runs to the Khyber region, whence an excellent highway runs to the Afghan capital through the fertile Khabul River Valley.

The British, however, if they occupied or attempted to pass through Afghanistan, would have to reckon with the hostility of a population embittered by 100 years of warfare, in which the British not always were victorious. This population numbers about 12,000,000. The army, because it lacks modern equipment, has little military value, but the average Afghan is an excellent guerrilla fighter, brave and hardy. About one million such men could take the field.

A majority of Afghan leaders are said to be pro-German. They feel that the continued independence of their country—which in the past could be maintained chiefly because of Anglo-Soviet rivalry—is gravely threatened now that London and Moscow are allies.

Consequently for the British to break through Afghanistan, and to maintain supply lines through a hardy, hostile population, might be no easy task. Natural difficulties also would be great, as this country includes the Hindukush Range, known as the "Roof of the World."

Fair Enough

The Chief Has Lost Touch

I BELIEVE everyone with access to a column more or less, of newsprint, to a microphone or to a neighbor's ear, has now stated his considered opinion of the document which President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill brought forth. I have refrained from expressing mine, because I have no opinion because the document is not valid, at least, because one of the parties, namely, President Roosevelt, did not possess the proper credentials. In other words, I believe that President Roosevelt has pulled away from the American people and will have to win back their confidence. He recalls to mind the experience of the late Maj. Lyman, a devoted Iowa patriot and a local journalist in Des Moines, who assembled his company in a lodge hall for service in the Philippines and started for the railroad cars at the head of a column, only to discover that somehow the troops had made a wrong turn on leaving the building and that he was marching along Walnut Street alone. Maj. Lyman was able to laugh about that in his later years, for, after all, he did find his command and they went out to the islands together, but this is no laughing matter. This is serious and for keeps and President Roosevelt has not only lost contact with his command, but has set up in the people a spirit of estrangement.

PEGLER

I BELIEVE it goes all the way back to the beginning of the so-called New Deal which never was a formulated plan or philosophy and has neither recognizable shape nor popular indorsement even now. Huey Long once described the President as a scrooch owl and went on to explain that a scrooch owl was one which would fly into the henhouse at night and scrooch up against the hens and scrooch and scrooch and scrooch.

"An' putty soon," Huey said, using the lowdown or red clay dialect which he sometimes affected for appeals to the acorn eaters, "dey ain't no hens."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has loaded the Federal Government with ringers from the left wing who were, and most of whom remain, unknown to the people and who never have been or could have been elected to any office. He has been conducting a relentless campaign against private property which is not merely the plants of U. S. Steel, Henry Ford and the Aluminum Co. but every man's pay, his home, his little store or his savings invested in securities. The Dies Committee of Congress has been hampered and harassed in public political demonstrations by the President, Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the Administration for the sole reason that the committee persistently turned up amid the scoops of muck in which it necessarily had to delve, men and women who were planted in the agencies of the National Government notwithstanding their communistic affiliations or associations.

Debt piled to mountainous heights and the American Congress raided the Treasury for local temporary benefits which the voters demanded as their "share." The very people, themselves, were taught and encouraged to practice civic cannibalism in which they devoured "the Guvment," and members of Congress who know better rocked along anyway because they realized that if they refused to raid the Treasury, the Administration would pour money into their constituencies to elect rivals who would gladly do so.

UNION LEADERS or notorious characters, dictators, thieves and Communists were given a clear license to persecute millions of the people and to riot against the public peace and private business and this license was defended as "labor's gains," even when union bosses struck against the works that were trying to produce weapons and equipment for men drafted into the armed forces.

So, while father and the boys were making history and amateur movies in the great meeting at sea, the people at home were asking somberly just what the United States might gain by winning the war. Is this a war for bankruptcy, repudiation of debt, the confiscation or total loss of every man's savings and the establishment of a government whose swollen and arrogant minor appointees, such as Leon Henderson, may sneer at the authority of Congress and flout its recommendations? Is this a war to establish several hundred small union dictatorships over the lives and earnings of workingmen, and presently to consolidate them into one?

The trouble is that the people don't know. They have grounds for uneasiness and suspicion and the present gives no reassuring sign.

Battle Stations Manned, Neutrality Patrol Units Keep U. S. Waters Safe for Shipping

(Joseph Driscoll is on a voyage with vessels of the United States Neutrality patrol. Following is the first account of his experiences. Navy censorship prevents disclosure of the place from which the story was sent.)

Somewhere in the Atlantic.—I have just crossed the Atlantic with one of the newly created United States Navy task forces and I am able to report that the Western Hemispheric portion of this body of water is being slowly, but surely, cleared of German submarines and surface raiders. Ocean travel will never be absolutely safe as long as the war lasts, but, thanks to American intervention, it is somewhat safer on our side of the Atlantic now than it was a few weeks ago.

This improvement has been accomplished without a battle thus far between American and Axis forces, although the Americans do not go to sea without their battle stations being fully manned, day and night. They do not venture forth with a chip on their shoulder and searching for trouble, but neither are they unprepared for any dire contingency. If the Italo-German fleets had any idea of turning the Atlantic into anohter "Mare Nostrum" they are doomed to disappointment, for the Anglo-American fleets are cooperating to give them a headache and make it read "Mare Nauseam."

As is well known, the main American fleet has been stationed in the Pacific for some time as a measure of obvious strategy. It is not so well known that the recently organized Atlantic fleet is an impressive aggregation of warships by itself, numbering around 150 units.

One of the main duties assigned to the Atlantic fleet is to keep the sea lanes open and to maintain the "freedom of the seas," as President Roosevelt has defined it.

By clearing the Atlantic or the greater part of it of Axis ships, the American fleet not only helps to feed and arm Britain, but it also brings essential reinforcements to new outposts of our own budding American empire and thereby throws further obstacles in the path of Adolf Hitler should he ever dare to move into the Western Hemisphere.

What is meant by a task force? Well, in naval parlance a task force is a sizable squadron of ships selected and equipped with choice materiel and personnel to accomplish a certain objective.

It must not be assumed that German warships have vanished altogether from the Atlantic. Quite the contrary. They are still reported there in considerable numbers. But they do submerge or steam away when they see or hear the Americans coming.

Although the ships with which I am traveling saw neither submarines nor surface raiders, our sound detection devices more than once indicated the presence of submarines in nearby waters. The morning before our first landfall, a half dozen bales of cotton—lend-lease cotton, maybe—floated past our destroyer. That evening we saw drifting debris which included a ship's life raft, a latticed affair mounted on pontoons.

One reason the Germans hide out is that they do not relish being seen by the Americans and having their position broadcast for the British and others to listen in. Being outnumbered in the Atlantic, the German U-boats and surface craft must operate by stealth.

One of the greatest American convoys since the World War years arrived safely in port today, bringing much needed reinforcements to this new outpost of the American empire.

The all-American convoy on which your correspondent had the privilege of traveling as press observer would constitute the eighth largest navy in the world. Obviously, this was no small squadron to send on one particular mission, but then this was a mission which could not fail—and it did not fail.

The cruise was exciting in every sense, especially to a landlubber observer who watched our vast procession of ships weaving its way cleverly between icebergs and submarines, surface raiders and mines. It is a pleasure to report that the officers and men of the United States Navy unanimously accept these dangers and carry on cheerfully, efficiently and valorously.

While 130,000,000 Americans sleep soundly, the eyes of the Navy are awake. A never-to-be-forgotten experience is to stand on the navigator's bridge of a carrier ship in midocean and watch the dawn patrol take off. Muffled up in leather coats and life savers, these fearless young men climb in their scout and fighting planes, warm up the engines, race down the carrier flight deck and soar off into space as unconcernedly as if they had all the solid space of the new Washington airport below them in case they had to make a forced landing.

The dawn patrol is the first aerial patrol of the day but not the last. a relief patrol goes aloft on a regular clockwork and the tired "policemen" come in for hot coffee and a nap. When embarked on such an important convoy a this one, the pilots and their radio-operator and machine-gunner companions are subjected to considerable fatigue under which they bear up bravely, being young and strong and devil-may-care.

All deck and port lights are doused and security watchmen makes the rounds of the ships hourly to see that the lights remain out.

There also is a blackout of sound. A radio silence prevails throughout the cruise since radio messages would betray the location of the sender.

Another precaution aboard the ships is to refrain from throwing food scraps and other rubbish overboard and, instead, to save the debris for the incinerators. Otherwise, the floating garbage would attract seagulls and thus betray a ship's location.

Poor Roads Might Hamper Germans in Eastern Turkey

If a western Europe power attempted to reach the oil-rich Russian Caucasus region through Turkey, the restricted rail and road facilities of eastern Turkey might seriously impede the transport of men and materials to the Soviet frontier.

"Only one through rail line reaches the Caucasus area from the west or south. The line runs from central Turkey through Erzincan and Erzurum to the Russian border and Tiflis, capital of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic," points out a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"Soldiers or supplies moving eastward through Turkey on the single railroad line to the Georgian border must change trains twice and ride over tracks of three different widths. West of Erzurum, the line is of standard European gauge. A narrow gauge mountain railway joins Erzurum with Sarikamis, while eastward of that town the trackage is of the Russian measure, which is wider than the European.

"Eastern Turkey is a mountainous country. Since the region has been inhabited by pastoral and farming people since the earliest times, there is an intricate network of horse and foot trails and, in places, of third-rate roads which often peter out on steep slopes or in rocky gorges. Recent maps show only two highways spanning eastern Turkey to meet Russian and Iranian (Persian) roads at the border.

"Of these two routes, the more southerly leads from the road and rail system of central Turkey, past Mount Ararat of biblical fame, and into northwestern Iran. The northerly road starts at the Black Sea port of Trabzon (ancient Trebizond), cuts southeastward through the mountains to meet the railroad at Erzurum, and forks east of that town. The north branch follows the rails through Kars to Leninakan in Russia, while the southern fork connects with a highway to Iran.

"Between Turkey, Syria, and Iraq, the transportation lines are more numerous and probably in better condition. The Berlin-Bagdad Railroad, linking Istanbul (Constantinople) with Ankara, northern Syria, and the oil fields of Iraq, has been completed. Another rail line sweeps across southeastern Turkey to the border town of Cizre, where it meets a good highway leading south into Iraq. Several other auto roads join Turkey with Syria and Iraq."

Official Pledges Puerto Rico's Support to U. S.

The Puerto Rican people feel that if Hitler wins in Europe with arms he can win in the Western Hemisphere without arms by an embargo and other measures, Luis Munoz Marin, president of the Puerto Rican Senate, told President Roosevelt yesterday. He pledged the full support of Puerto Rico for the American government's policies.

"Although we are an outpost of the military defense of the United States, we do not think there is much immediate danger of bombs falling on us," Munoz Marin said.

"Soldiers have to beat him over there with guns and bombs. We must help them with supplies and machines and everything else if necessary. In Puerto Rico, the people are keenly aware of the danger. I am surprised, after several weeks here, to find that many of you are not."

Montgomery Health Center Site Picked

Approval of the establishment of a health center at the old Blair School, Bladensburg Road, near Clifton Park, Md., was voted by the Public Health Lay Committee of Silver Spring, Md., yesterday.

The committee also voted to get bids for the renovation of the old schoolhouse. Mrs. Albert Denham, chairman, appointed Mrs. Frank Smith State health chairman of the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers, in charge of the project.

Appointment of a board of managers to act as an advisory council will be made by Mrs. Smith within a few days. This plan was favored by the committee at the meeting. The health center is now housed in the county building on Georgia Avenue. Its growth has made expansion necessary to carry on health clinics.

Designed for Small Quarters

DEFENSE WORKERS and others compelled to adjust their living accommodations to smaller quarters will look with favor upon the new duplex bed, shown above, as it appears for daytime use, covered with attractive slipcover and round bolsters at each end. The lower part of the bed pulls out easily and then rises to normal bed level for sleeping purposes. It may be used as a double bed, or as two single beds, as it is equipped with two regular innerspring mattresses. The duplex is made in either mahogany or harvest mahogany finishes

Colorful Latin Accent Appears In U. S. Clothes

Hollywood, Calif.—Now that North and South America have joined hands in friendship, there is every indication that they will also "swap" clothes. This is the opinion voiced by Mona Maris, a lovely native of Argentina.

Brunette Mona, who plays a South American role in "Law of the Tropics," reports that the women of her country are as conscious of Hollywood and New York styles as they formerly were of the smart Parisian clothes.

Mona is an excellent example of "South of the Border" chic and although her clothes are strictly North American, now that she belongs to Hollywood, she still manages a sly Latin touch that is usually a colorful one.

Hollywood Takes Lead

For example, she often rides in bombachas, the long-legged pantaloons worn by the gauchos. One of her most interesting outfits consists of bombachas of dark brown gabardine, a light brown silk shirt and dark brown leather boots. Girding her waist is a wide maroon leather belt stubbed with silver conches.

It was Mona who gave Constance Bennett the idea for a smart serape dress she wears that is very stunning. The dress, just simple in line, is of a natural crash linen. Draped over the right shoulder, then to the left hip, and falling to the bottom of the skirt is a broad serape of linen in gayly colored stripes. Rust linen sandals, the rust picking up the predominant tone of the serape, are matched in a beret. Constance has put this outfit on her preferred list for the rest of the summer.

Skirt News

SCOTCH PLAID in bold design makes this wrap-around skirt for the college girl, to be worn with man-tailored shirts and, mayhap, pigtails tied with tape. Fulled on to a wide waist band, it is not unlike the calico "broomstick" numbers which bloomed all over the summer fashion scene

Calcium-Rich Diet Prolongs Youth

Most Persons Don't Get Nearly Enough Of This Mineral

By Ida Jean Kain

WE ARE A NATION of enthusiasts. When we go for something, we go all the way. Now that vitamins have caught the public fancy and are on the tip of everybody's tongue, it's time we paid more attention to the minerals for they are equally important to good nutrition.

Experiments have shown that although the average diet contains fair amounts of iron and phosphorus, it is very deficient in calcium and this mineral is a vital factor in health and looks. Here is what calcium does: It helps to keep you young, extends your prime, and is essential to good musculature and to the structure of bones and teeth. And yet you probbaly do not get nearly enough of it.

Science estimates that .8 grams of calcium are needed daily by the adult, 1.0 grams by the infant and small child, and approximately 1.5 grams are needed daily by the growing boy or girl. The best sources of supply for this mineral are milk and cheese.

Amount Varies

As far as calcium value goes, whole milk, skim milk, evaporated milk and dried milk are all about on a par. But there is a wide variation in the amounts that can be obtained from different kinds of cheese. Such hard, compact cheeses as American, Swiss and Roquefort are high in calcium but the amounts furnished in soft and cottage cheese are surprisingly small. Cottage cheese, a familiar item on low calorie diets, is valuable mainly for its protein. The calcium content is very low. The reason for this is that in the process of separating the curd from the whey, and discarding the whey, a large part of the calcium is also separated and discarded.

Milk and Cheese Needed

Recently I have had a number of requests for a list of the calcium-rich foods, along with the amounts to be obtained from average servings. To make it easier for you to check your daily menus for calcium, I have worked out this list and have added the calorie count for the benefit of the reducers. As you total your calcium intake from various food sources, you will find it almost impossible to get your full share without using milk or cheese or both every day.

Furniture Industry Provides Emergency Sleeping Equipment

By Martha Ellyn
Post Household Editor

GASOLINE, SILK HOSE and a place to sleep are inexhaustible topics of conversation these days in our war-conscious capital. There is little to be done except adjust to the gasoline and silk rationing situations, but the matter of a comfortable place to sleep does seem to have a solution.

In the housing problem created by the rapid expansion of national defense, the more effective utilization of available space in home, apartment or wherever defense workers settle, has been a great problem.

While manufacturers can't offer space, they have had the interest of defense workers at heart, as was revealed at the recent furniture market in Chicago, where they introduced sleeping equipment—beds and pillows—which solve the space problem, at no sacrifice to comfort, durability or style.

Promotes Real Rest

Greatest of all difficulties experienced in fitting sizable families or group of persons into small space, is the problem of providing good sleeping accommodations. Manufacturers recognize that sleeping makeshifts will not do and thus are offering dual-purpose furniture which is not only attractive, but conducive of restful and refreshing sleep, thus insuring the vim and vigor essential to professional effectiveness.

Among the new products shown in Chicago, of special interest to Capital workers, is a combination davenport bed, called the Duplex. Available in a choice of regular mahogany or harvest mahogany finishes, it is a downright fashionable article of daytime furnishing for the living room. It may be slipcovered in a choice of fabrics and designs either purchased already made, or put together by the homemaker. At night, the Duplex unfolds into a full-size bed single or double.

Avoids "Sinking Feeling"

The lower part pulls out and then raises to bed level, so there isn't that feeling of sleeping almost next to the floor, which characterized earlier models. Either as two beds or as a single, full-size double bed, the Duplex is equipped with regular innerspring mattresses to promote restful sleep.

Available also are pillows which may be used against the back of the bed in the daytime, or as bolsters for the ends of the bed. The bed is so constructed that it may be made up for nighttime use and kept that way, if so desired. There is no necessity of removing sheets, pillows and covers to a daytime hiding place, and then making the bed anew every night.

A Collector's Item

The scold's chair is a collector's item in English furniture. It is a staunch affair with a seat that lowers when sat upon, while ankle grips project below and hold the sitter fast till someone releases a certain spring. 'Tis said that in olden days of Merrie England a woman who nagged had to sit there till she was ready to behave.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Nervous Excitement Attendant on Spaced Visits With Beau, Now Serving as 'Selectee,' Invariably Makes Girl Ill; Can the Condition Be Corrected?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Although I realize you are not a physician, perhaps you can help me with my problem. Since my boy friend has been drafted, which means that I see him only about once a month, I notice that around the time when I am to see him, and while we are together, I can never eat very much. I realize I should eat and when I force myself to, I feel sick at my stomach.

I become so ill at times that I am afraid to leave the house, and even though I try to fight off the feeling, it strongly persists. This spoils the wonderful few hours we are together and I am wondering if it can be cured. I am quite upset, and sometimes wonder if the condition would be aggravated by marriage. It occurs to me that it may be due to suppressed emotions; but if so, what can I do to correct it? Your advice will be deeply appreciated. G. M.

DEAR G. M.: The feeling of illness attendant on seeing your beau is mentally induced. It comes of giving those meetings too much of an imaginative "build-up," in advance,—and of brooding over them excessively in retrospect. From one meeting to another, no doubt, your thoughts are principally occupied in (a) "living over" what was said and done the last time; (b) measuring actual occurrences against what (if you had had your wits about you) might have been said and done that would have been a closer approximation of your heart's desire; and (c) concocting imaginary conversation and behavior that you fondly hope will take place at the next meeting. In other words, your whole relationship with the young man is veering more toward an experience in phantasy (something "dreamed up") on your part, than toward a come-day, go-day, down-to-earth, first-hand savoring of the realities of your episodic association.

When finally the great day rolls around when you are to see him again, after a month's separation, you are in a state of abnormal emotional tension; in a fever of romantic excitement which must be subjected to rigid control, if you are to preserve a creditably nonchalant or demure outward manner. But this is not so much owing to the young man's actual effect upon your sensibilities as to the effect which your own misuse of imagination is having upon your own nervous system. Thus, your agitation resulting in stomach sickness is mostly self-caused and is amenable to self-cure. (And this, incidentally, is not alone my opinion; but also the opinion of a diagnostician with whom I have discussed your symptoms).

A revision of your general pattern of thought and behavior is necessary for calming your quivering nerves and queasy stomach. You need, firstly, to keep your mind and time more fully occupied with an abundance of wholesome social diversions appropriate to youth, during your best beau's absence. Indeed, this seems a case where it would be wise to make a point of keeping him out of the forefront of mind, when he is out of sight,—by devoting yourself enthusiastically to activities that will afford stimulating conversational material when you can be together.

Secondly, as the day approaches when you will be seeing him, you should foresightedly but casually "stoke up" on both food and rest, enough to carry you through the hectic period when you will have temporarily lost your taste for such things. Then, during that period, don't attempt "forced feedings" of man-sized portions of what you don't want. If you down a bit of something substantial, now and again, such as milk, or steak or a chop, or even a nourishing favorite dessert, you can keep the giddiness of unsuspected hunger at bay, and at the same time refrain from offending your digestive tract.

If, in trying to get started on a poised new approach to the situation, you find relaxed slumber before or after his visits impossible to achieve, at first, ask a doctor to prescribe a harmless sedative to break the grip of insomnia. (There are some few such sedatives, known to good physicians.) Then use it intelligently, which means sparingly. Don't learn to lean on it. For your purpose should be to get rational control of your jitters, with a minimum of outside help and artificial assistance.

As to whether marriage might aggravate your tremulous condition, the answer is: No, a happy marriage would promptly cure it. Because, in marriage, once adjusted to it, you would be experiencing love realistically, which experience would automatically deliver you from the spell of anxious, nerve-tautening preoccupation with adventures in erotic phantasy. Also, feeling secure in the companionship of the man you loved, you would immediately relax into easy, natural behavior. Whereas, at this stage in your current courtship, you are constantly strained by a feeling of need to outdo yourself, as well as the world of other girls, in being fascinating for the man's benefit, when in his presence.

Which means, unfortunately, that you have been defeating your own purpose (namely: to win and hold his heart) by thinking overly much about him and how to please him. Because one can't be magnetic when striving tiredly and tensely for special effect. So take yourself in hand, in the manner outlined, and as you learn to be relaxed in his company, you will find your enjoyment of each other's society increasing accordingly. M. H.

Peaceful Arts Thrive Despite War Menace

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

YOU WOULDN'T believe—in this year of war—that so many good ideas would have been devoted to the peaceful arts and crafts. But the recent Furniture Market in Chicago has introduced many alluring new things for pleasant homes. These have a particularly poignant appeal to home-making hearts this year . . . remembering that the coming seasons may be lean ones. Among the novelties noted are many practical solutions of small-space furnishing problems.

A bedside table with a shelf that swings out for reading or breakfast in bed looks very convenient. The table itself is simple and modern in design—a brain child of Russel Wright. A chest of drawers, for a bedroom is really a clothes file, so efficiently is it planned with tiers of shallow drawers, proper proportions for shirts, a top drawer with a mirror that lifts up. A bed in this same group has a cedar lined blanket drawer in the footboard.

"Sociable" Tables

For the most functional type of modern living-dining room, there are several living room cabinets made to hold china, glass and linen; some are equipped to hold services for beverages too. There are any number of extremely usable small tables—one is a combination coffee table and lamp table with a raised end for lamp and plants, while the lower level has a removable tray for serving. Another sociable table is in three separate sections that can be used together as one large table or separate as three small tables. A new end table has record album compartments in the base, while another end table has drop leaves. Coffee or cocktail tables with drop leaves are popular, too. Among the new shaped tables, the clover outline for coffee and lamp tables seems to be "taking hold."

Rockers Return

Rockers and platform rockers are included in several new lines of furniture—reflecting the trend toward friendly casual moods in decorating. For upholstery, painted and crinkled leathers have a new look . . . so do intricate button tuftings.

Half-Yard of Jersey Enough to Make Matching Hat, Bag

A MATCHING PURSE and turban to wake an envious gleam in a friend's eye—and none will guess you made the set yourself!

A mere half yard of 40-inch silk or wool jersey is needed for the chic turban which carries you so gaily into fall. Try tangerine red to liven beiges and browns; fuchsia to smarten blues, black!

Start by cutting out a 16-by-40-inch strip of fabric. Fold lengthwise and sew across one end. Then press open seam and gather on seam with strong thread, as diagram shows in booklet. Pull gathers to 2 inches, fasten thread securely.

Now cut material lengthwise on the fold to within 8½ inches of gathers, as in diagram. Round the ends, hem the edges and your turban's ready to put on. Place gathered part in front, tie ends in way most becoming to you.

The foundation of your smart bag is just two pieces of material (each 7½ by 17 inches) which are sewn together, reinforced with buckram and lined. To the front sew a piece which you've shirred over 3 lengths of table cord.

Send 15c in coins for your booklet, "Dress Accessories You Can Make," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Mrs. Jean Patterson Wed to Edmund Wilson

Daughter of Mrs. Charles Rushmore Becomes Aircraft Executive's Bride in Monterrey, Mexico

In the mail today are announcements of a wedding which will come as a complete surprise to Washington society. Mrs. Charles Edward Rushmore is making known the news that her daughter, Mrs. Jean Rushmore Patterson, was married August 3 to Edmund Wilson, of New York, executive of an aircraft corporation.

The couple were wed in Mexico, with no previous announcement of their engagement. Mrs. Wilson was down there doing radio work, and her husband-to-be joined her. They were married in Monterey with two friends from Mexico as witnesses.

The bride has returned to her home in Washington and will divide her time between this city and New York. She is the daughter of the late Charles Edward Rushmore, noted New York lawyer, for whom Mount Rushmore is named. Her husband attended Princeton University, leaving to go abroad and fight in the last World War, and returning to graduate in 1918. He is a member of the University Club and the Princeton Club. Mrs. Wilson's son, Rushmore Patterson, is also a Princeton graduate.

Mrs. Wilson, one of the most energetic of Washington women, founded the women's division of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies. She has served as its chairman for several months and upon resigning was succeeded by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former United States Minister to Norway.

For the past two years Mrs. Wilson has been working as a volunteer in other patriotic activities. She has been doing a series of broadcasts from Army flying fields throughout the country, describing the safety precautions taken for the students and other sidelights of particular interest to women.

Makes Broadcast In Mexico

While in Mexico Mrs. Wilson carried out the first broadcast ever given by Mexican women with an American. She spoke over the government radio with Senora Castillo Ledon and Senorita Rubeo, of Mexico, both distinguished women. The former was once a delegate here to the Inter-American Conference of Women, and Senorita Rubeo has done important work with the primary schools of Mexico.

Last year Mrs. Wilson wrote a slim volume, "Letter to Anne Lindbergh," which was widely hailed as a reply to the author's "Wave of the Future."

Another wedding of interest to Washington will be that on Saturday in Wilmette, Ill., of Miss Eunice Gilbert McIntosh to Simon Whitney of this city. Mr. Whitney recently left for Chicago to take part in the prewedding parties.

The ceremony will be performed at noon at the Church of the Holy Comforter, the Rev. Leland Danforth officiating. A breakfast at the home of Mrs. Walter Gilbert McIntosh will follow. After a honeymoon the couple will return to Washington to live at 2511 Q Street. Mr. Whitney is an economist with the Bureau of Export Control.

Mr. Whitney's ushers will include several well known in Washington. They are Francis Walker and Frank Currie, former Capital residents with whom the bridegroom-elect has been sharing a house in New York for the past few years. Warren Husnberger, of Washington; Walter McIntosh, the bride's brother; William C. Hayn, her brother-in-law, and John Davenport, of New York, brother of Russell Davenport, will be the other ushers. Prof. Hassler Whitney, of Weston, Mass., will serve as best man for his brother.

Sister to Be Matron of Honor

Mrs. Hayn will serve as matron of honor for her sister, and the bridesmaids are Miss Elizabeth Whitney, of New York, sister of Mr. Whitney; Miss Jane Henderson, of Wilmette; Miss Anne Bovis, of Evanston, Ill., and the Misses Josephine and Jennie Morrison, of Sterling, Colo.

The prospective bride is a graduate of Northwestern University, where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma. Mr. Whitney is an alumnus of Yale University, where he also obtained his Ph.D. degree. He is the son of Mrs. Edward B. Whitney and the late Judge Whitney who was a justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

Another bride-to-be, Miss Nancy Glover, has been in town this week to arrange details of her wedding September 6 to A. Lloyd Symington, of Washington. The ceremony will take place in the Chapel of St. Alden on the estate of Alanson B. Houghton at South Dartmouth, Mass. A breakfast at the summer home in Nonquitt of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, parents of Miss Glover, will follow the ceremony. Many from Washington are expected to attend.

Mrs. Uline Hill Is Married To Dr. Pratt

In Detroit, Mich., last evening, Mrs. Uline Hill became the bride of Dr. Jean Paul Pratt, of that city. The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock in the couple's new home on Fairway Drive.

Mrs. Hill, whose only attendant was her daughter, Patricia, wore a gown of blue jersey cut on Grecian lines, with a draped neckline, and long tight sleeves. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls and the orchids in her hair matched the white orchids of her corsage.

Miss Patricia Hill, who was one of Washington's most popular debutantes last year, wore a draped-peplum dress of rose colored jersey set off by a gold belt. Her headdress and corsage were of purple orchids. Charles Pratt, a student of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., served his father as best man.

Following the ceremony a small reception for the immediate family was held. The newlyweds will entertain at a large reception September 10. They will postpone a honeymoon until later when they will go on an extensive tour of the South and sojourn for a while in New Orleans.

Dr. and Mrs. Pratt and Miss Hill will come to Washington for a visit in the fall.

Dr. Pratt is chief of gynecology and obstetrics at the Ford Hospital in Detroit. He is a Fellow of the American Medical Association and of the College of Surgeons. The author of many medical textbooks, he is prominently connected with innumerable other distinguished medical associations and is a member of Sigma Xi and Alpha Omega Alpha, honorary medical fraternities.

Mrs. James Powell Clay and her son, James, have returned to Washington after a six-week motor trip through the South and Middle West.

Mrs. Clay is staying in Washington in an apartment at 2301 Cathedral Avenue while her husband, Lieut. Comdr. Clay, is stationed in London as an assistant naval attache.

Mrs. Dwight Davis Back, Calls Spirit Of British Amazing

Mrs. Dwight Davis arrived in New York on the Clipper on Tuesday and is expected to go to her home in Southampton, Long Island, before coming to Washington to report on her findings in London. She went over there with Mrs. Hendrick Eustis in her capacity as director of the Volunteer Services of the American Red Cross.

Interviewed on her arrival, Mrs. Davis declared that her outstanding impression was the spirit of the people, which she described as "perfectly amazing." From a little old woman of the East End, who had lost everything, to Queen Elizabeth herself, who received the American Red Cross officials, Mrs. Davis said she had found the people prepared for very hard times ahead, but "ready to take it."

Fellow passengers of Mrs. Davis were Lord Louis Mountbattan, a cousin of King George VI, and Lady Mountbatten. Lord Mountbatten will take command of a British warship now being repaired here, and his wife will thank the American people personally for the aid they have been giving Britain.

The national defense program of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be further geared up when Mrs. E. Thomas Boyd, of Denver, Colo., national chairman, arrives here the first week in September to confer with Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general.

Meanwhile a message from Mrs. Boyd is going out to State and chapter chairmen of national defense throughout the country from D. A. R. headquarters here this week.

Mrs. Boyd, whose title is chairman of the national defense through patriotic education committee, suggested in her message that chapters hold quiz programs on the Constitution, the Bill of Rights and the Nationality Act as an educational exercise.

She pointed out also that patriatic defense literature for use not only in D. A. R. chapters but in schools, service men's recreation centers and camps, is available through the office of her committee.

Mrs. Boyd suggested that defense chairmen in the chapters include in their annual reports such activities as work in recreational centers and other home defense tasks, observance of Citizenship Day, distribution and exhibits of national defense literature, use of patriotic films, provision of speakers for other organizations.

D. A. R. members' enrollment for voluntary services in their communities has already assumed an important place in the organization's defense program this year.

A plan to "scramble" club members at business meetings and luncheons of the Federation of Women's Clubs is one of the objectives of Mrs. Arthur Charles Watkins, president, to promote better acquaintance among the groups in the coming season.

Since members from the same clubs are inclined to sit together at these meetings and hobnob largely with persons that they already know, Mrs. Watkins hopes to start a custom of mixing groups.

As a means of promoting more unity of action, she would like to have a presidents' conference this fall—a meeting of presidents of the federated clubs to discuss their aims and to find common objectives.

Mrs. Watkins, in an interview on the "Women Who Achieve" radio program recently, told of her start as an executive—presiding over a one-room country school when she was only 16 years old in New York, her native State. The next year, she had 30 pupils, still in a one-room building, and she succeeded a man teacher who had left because he could not control some of the large boys. She managed to handle the class, although some of the pupils were as old as she, and taller.

She taught school for more than 20 years . . . finally combining it with homemaking and study of her own. She earned a B. S. degree at Columbia University in New York, while she was teaching at Speyer School, the experimental school of Teachers College at the University and while keeping house and taking care of her small daughter.

Collins Leave

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Collins have closed their house on Thirtieth Street and will leave this week for Omaha, Nebr., where they will make their future home.

Mrs. Rogers Is Delegate To Faith Parley

Mrs. Harold B. Rogers will represent the Washington Council of Church Women at the National Conference of Christians and Jews, opening Sunday at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass. in conjunction with the Institute of Human Relations.

Mrs. Rogers, who is supervisor of area chairmen for the council here, will take part in a round table discussion group on problems in achieving community cooperation. She is concerned with coordinating the work of the Washington Church Women's area chairmen who at present are making a survey of their community's assets and needs, as a means of stimulating improvement and use of resources.

The conference, which will extend from Sunday through Friday, is based on the theme, "The World We Want to Live In," from the standpoint of citizens, workers, patriots, neighbors and Americans.

Thomas E. Dewey will be panel leader at one of the opening sessions on "Citizens in the World We Want to Live In." Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, will speak on "Economics as a Factor in Human Relations" on the program on "Workers." A group of Latin-American speakers under direction of Nelson Rockefeller, coordinator of commercial and cultural relations between the American republics, will appear on the program on "Neighbors."

Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mother Appear to Be Reconciled

Announcement Hints 6-Year-Old Quarrel Over Gloria Is Ended

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 20.—Indication that a reconciliation might have been effected between Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt and her mother, estranged by a bitter court fight six years ago, was contained in an announcement by Mrs. Vanderbilt today.

Mrs. Vanderbilt said in a telephoned statement to the Associated Press:

"I am happy to state that my mother, Mrs. Harry Hays Morgan, is enjoying very good health."

The statement followed published reports that both Mrs. Vanderbilt and her daughter, Gloria, 13, had flown from California to New York because Mrs. Morgan was ill here.

While Mrs. Vanderbilt refused to say more, friends of the family felt that her statement indicated more interest in her mother than she has shown since the great court battle over the custody of Gloria, jr.

Mrs. Morgan sided against her daughter and with Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney in the latter's successful suit to gain custody of the younger Gloria, charging that Mrs. Vanderbilt was not a fit person to rear the child.

At present Mrs. Whitney has custody of Gloria except for three summer months, when the child is in the custody of her mother.

Women Voters Told of Empire

As background for the day's headlines, Mrs. Ernest Faesch discussed the evolution of the British Empire in a talk yesterday at the meeting of the foreign policy department of the District League of Women Voters.

"Britain's evolution from a small kingdom to a powerful world empire has been largely due to her insular position. Being safe from invasion while continental Europe was almost constantly at war, England had opportunity to become a unified nation long before other European countries," she told the meeting at the home of Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, 3510 Porter Street Northwest.

Mrs. Faesch has been an active member of the league's foreign policy department for a number of years.

"Today when the British Empire is under fire not only from German guns, but from the criticisms of isolationists, it is wise for us to study and evaluate the empire.

"From the humblest commercial beginnings Englishmen have built up the most extensive and complicated political, economic and cultural organization the world has ever known.

"Flexibility is the keynote to imperial administration. The empire contains some 200 separate diverse political units, held together by allegiance to the crown, symbol of the empire," she said.

The foreign policy department, headed by Mrs. Harvey E. Becknell, completed its summer series with this program and will take a recess before starting its fall work.

TWELVE MEMBERS of the new school for airline hostesses at the National Airport stroll to class through the main waiting room with their instructor and an airline hostess leading the way

AIRLINE HOSTESSES must have a knowledge of first-aid. Clifford Sager is the victim upon whom Pauline Bourne tries her new knowledge. Instructor Geraldine Grimm, chief hostess, and the rest of the class watches

Really Exclusive

TWELVE beauties (Mmmm! Just look) have begun the low road of cramming at the National Airport so they may travel the high road of scramming through the atmosphere as hostesses aboard airliners.

Nearly 1000 girls had applied to Pennsylvania-Central Airlines for the chance to attend the new hostess-training school here. But by selection the airline weeded out applicants until only 12 girls were left. These were the 12.

ALL are unmarried and between 21 and 25. All weigh in proportion to their height. All have either two years of college or are graduate nurses. All are pretty, and all have plenty of personality and poise.

Keeping hostesses unmarried became such a problem to the airline that it became necessary to have the girls sign a contract promising to pay the cost of their training if they should leave in less than a year. Previously, the average length of service was seven months before the girls left on honeymoons.

"They meet so many interesting men," Miss Geraldine Grimm, chief air hostess, said yesterday.

AT THE school, which lasts four weeks, the fledgeling hostesses receive training in first aid. In actual practice they use this training to the extent of giving passengers aspirin, Miss Grimm said, but its a good thing to know.

A course in meteorology is given so they may talk about the weather intelligently. Also they receive instruction in airline paper work and the control of traffic in the air.

The girls do no flying during the course. That comes later, after graduation. The airline officials don't worry about that part. Their big headache still is how to keep all these nifties single.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Funds, Space Bar Additional OPM Hiring

Office of Production Management has requested funds to hire 1500 additional employes but even if the money were available very few could be hired because there is no space in which to put them. Most of the 1500 new employes would be assigned to the five new industrial sub-sections. The number would include about 500 industrial specialists and at least another 500 typists and stenographers. OPM and the Civil Service Commission are campaigning the country over for industrial specialists. Able typists and stenographers who have had Government experience are welcomed at OPM.

Fact is the OPM has hired so many stenographers away from other Federal agencies—usually by raising their salaries from $1440 to $1620—that hundreds have had their salaries raised to keep them from transferring to OPM and other defense agencies. As a result the Federal pay of secretaries, it is believed, is at a record high.

OPM's Division of Research and Statistics is being moved to the Raleigh Hotel. The Army Ordnance Division was supposed to move out of the new Social Security Board building and OPM was to take over its 80,000 feet of space. Now the Ordnance Division refuses to move . . . James W. Irwin has transferred from the Interstate Commerce Commission to the Civil Service Commission, where he'll hold hearings on alleged violations of the Hatch Act.

William Knudsen, director general of OPM, will be appointed chairman of an all-powerful priorities policy board if the President takes the advice of some of his closest advisors. Six other members also would be named. They are expected to be Vice President Wallace, Sidney Hillman, War Secretary Stimson, Navy Secretary Knox, OPACS Chief Leon Henderson, and Lend-Lease Administrator Hopkins.

It was indicated that Stimson and Knox would be taken from the OPM council and put on the priorities policy board which would control both civilian supply and priorities. It's possible, however, that the present OPM council will remain only "on paper." Reported to be under consideration for the key executive job of carrying out the board's policies are Brig. Gen. Philip Fleming, Wage and Hour administrator, and Donald Nelson, director of OPM purchases.

Employes whose agencies are being transferred out of Washington in the decentralization drive are to get a break from the Civil Service Commission. The Commission has set up a central placement service to help those employes who want to remain in Washington, to get other jobs. "It is believed," the Commission said, "that the new project will obviate the necessity of such employes making the rounds of all Government establishments for the purpose of filing individual applications with personnel offices of each agency."

Henry W. Rempe, the commission's ace trouble-shooter, is director of the service. Interviews can be had from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m., Monday through Friday. Representatives of defense agencies also will interview the applicants in Room 260 of the commission. The facilities are not to be used by employes who want to transfer out of Washington. The employe must have a written release from his employing agency before service will be given.

Unless some sort of catastrophe happens today, Cyrus T. Bright, Commerce Bureau official, will have served in the Federal service 42 years without being late for work once . . . The President issued an order yesterday exempting from Civil Service part-time postal employes hired for the Xmas rush . . . Duke Siroplo is running a Government employe tour to New York over Labor Day on the B. & O. Tickets go on sale today at the railroad office.

'Trouble on the Road'

Philadelphia, Aug. 20 (A.P.)—No one was injured and little damage was caused today as two automobiles collided, overturning one, but the street was covered with cards reading: "Plan ahead now for the next time you have trouble on the road."

The overturned car was driven by an attorney for an automobile club.

Charleston, S. C., Aug. 20 (A.P.).—A small boy went into the store to buy a 5-cent cake of soap. He approached the counter reluctantly.

"What kind do you want, son?" said the grocer.

"The kind for Saturday night," said the boy.

Va. to Credit D. C. Residents On Income Tax

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Aug. 20.—Many District of Columbia residents who come across the line into Virginia to work must file Virginia income tax returns, State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett indicated today.

However, the nonresident workers will get credit for their income tax paid to the District under Virginia's policy of reciprocity.

"Persons actually living and domiciled in the District of Columbia who work in Virginia," Morrissett explained, 'are taxable as nonresidents of Virginia under the Virginia income tax law on income earned in Virginia, but as these persons are also liable to the District under the District income tax law, and as the District law does not apply to residents of Virginia who work in the District, Virginia gives credit for the tax paid the District by persons actually living and domiciled in the District on the Virginia tax assessable against them as nonresidents of Virginia.

"Unless and until there is additional Virginia legislation, persons actually living and domiciled in the District who work on United States military or naval reservations within the geographical confines of Virginia will not be regarded as liable to file Virginia income tax returns solely by reason of that fact."

The tax commissioner did not say specifically how the new Navy Department building in Arlington County or the proposed new War Department building would be considered, but it is presumed that employes in these offices would be subject to the Virginia tax so long as there was no specific ruling to the contrary.

District of Columbia residents working at the Navy torpedo plant at Alexandria, on the other hand, would come under the exemption by reason of their work on a Federal reservation.

The District income tax is lower than Virginia's, and for that reason most D. C. workers may have to pay income levies to both the District and the Old Dominion. The District rates range from 1 per cent for the first $5000 of taxable income to 3 per cent for all in excess of $20,000, while Virginia's rate sarts at 1.5 per cent for the first $3000 and goes to 3 per cent for all over $5000.

Mary C. Gainey Of Women's Bureau Made Lieutenant

Lieut. Gainey

The appointment, effective August 12, is contingent upon an additional Congressional appropriation continuing her service as a lieutenant beyond June 30, 1942. The position pays an annual salary of $3000.

The promotion was made upon recommendation of Acting Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly.

Maryland to Probe Capital Transit Service Criticism

Baltimore, Aug. 20 (A.P.).—Maryland's Public Service Commission today undertook an investigation of a request for improvements to the New Hampshire Avenue bus line of the Capital Transit Co. of Washington.

A petition asserting that present service on the line is "wholly inadequate for the requirements of this community" was presented to the commission by 103 residents of the New Hampshire Avenue Highlands and Hillwood Manor.

The petition asserted that many bus-line patrons had to walk five or six blocks along busy New Hampshire Avenue and that they often were forced to walk on muddy dirt shoulders. Frequent breakdowns of service occur, the petition said.

Should D. C. Adopt Fast Time? Post Solicits Readers' Votes

Are you in favor of daylight saving time for the district of Columbia?

The President wants it on a year-round basis for the entire country as an aid to national defense through conservation of electric power.

Parts of Virginia and other nearby States—except Maryland—already have adopted the change.

Across the river, residents of Arlington, Fairfax and the City of Alexandria are awaiting action by the District before falling in line with their State's policy.

The Commissioners are not certain what should be done in Washington. So they asked The Post to take a poll of its readers on this apparently controversial question.

Commissioner Guy Mason suggested The Post ask residents of Washington and its metropolitan area how they feel about "fast time."

The attached blank is for the readers' convenience. Just fill it in and send or bring it to The Washington Post. The Commissioners will be kept in touch daily with the trend in sentiment.

Mason and Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz said they want to know the public's attitude on the proposed switch to daylight time before taking any steps.

They pointed out that legislation would be necessary to adopt the plan here and have agreed to draft the necessary measure, if that is what residents of the city want.

One way or another, they want to know. If necessary, the Commissioners are willing to hold public hearings on the matter.

Fill in the blank and send it to The Post.

D. C. Fire Losses Rise $61,570 In Year, Chief Says

Fire losses in the District during the past fiscal year jumped $61,570 over the year before, Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter reported to the Commissioners yesterday. Total estimated losses for the period were $795,071.

During the same time, Chief Porter said, multiple alarm blazes increased 16 over the previous year. The total last year was 39. The total number of all types of alarms was 7186, he said.

The actual number of fires was 4584 and false alarms totaled 849—an increase of 250. Arrests and convictions in false alarm cases numbered 17, Porter reported.

District fire apparatus, he added, rendered assistance outside the city in 22 instances.

Dog Escapes Death as Vicious But Court Fines His Owner $50

Jack, a 6-year-old bull dog, adjudged vicious by Police Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday, escaped a mandatory death penalty but his owner, Lewis Smith of 610 F Street Southwest, was fined the maximum under the law—$50.

Prosecution of Jack's owner was begun in April after the dog allegedly attacked and severely injured Billie Sisson, 7, of 604 Sixth Street Southwest. Billie, it was testified, was hospitalized for 11 days before he recovered from wounds to his face and body.

The defendant denied that Jack was vicious and that he attacked the Sisson boy. Percy Thomas, Negro, a houseboy for Smith, told the court the dog was locked up all day, August 27, when the boy was bitten.

Billie identified Jack as his attacker as did the boy's aunt, Mrs. May Cundiff, who said she heard Billie's screams and went to his aid, chasing Jack away. The dog ran into Smith's yard, she stated.

It was established during the trial that the bull dog previously had attacked another child. Policeman G. L. Carter, Fourth Precinct, testified to an investigation he made in January, 1940, of a complaint against Jack.

Smith was tried under a section of the District Code which prohibits "fierce and dangerous dogs to go at large." Though Smith was fined the maximum, Judge McMahon did not evoke a paragraph in the law which provides "the court shall adjudge and order such animal delivered to the poundmaster to be killed."

D.C. Road Bid Setup Draws Warren's Fire

Congressional Probe May Follow Charges of 'Loading' And Inefficiency

A charge by Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren that "inadequate, inaccurate and overstated estimates have been and are being used in requesting bids for the repair and improvement of streets and highways" by the District government last night promised to bring speedy Congressional investigation.

Result of a long study by the Comptroller General's office, the lengthy report criticizing the District's means of seeking bids and making contracts was referred to the Senate District Committee yesterday.

The report purported to disclose that contracts entered into pursuant to bids are "so uncertain and indefinite in their essential terms and provisions that they do not constitute valid contracts," and "when made are void for uncertainty."

The study stated further that "bids are asked and received on far more items and quantities of materials and work than are expected to be, and than are, furnished and performed.

"As an example, bids may be asked on 50 items of material and work, while usually not more than 25 or 30 of such items are furnished.

"Such practices have resulted in the submission, receipt and acceptance of unbalanced or 'loaded' bids."

"Confirmation of the charge was found," the report said, by the fact that from February 16, 1937, to July 17, 1940, "there was close to an even division of work" between the four principal contractors engaged in highway repair work in the District.

1. Corson and Gruman, 67 bids, 20 contracts totaling $1,329,106.74.

2. Highway Engineering and Construction Co., 46 bids, 20 contracts, totaling $1,436,795.75.

3. McGuire & Rolfe, 58 bids, 14 contracts, totaling $1,292,074.50.

4. Wilmoth Paving Co., 45 bids, 13 contracts, totaling $1,233,041.30.

Further "Evidence" Noted

"Further evidence of the receipt and acceptance of unbalanced and loaded bids is found in the fact that on several occasions throughout the period mentioned, a single or given bidder submitted unit prices on estimated quantities of materials and work on as many as three different jobs; on or about the same date and that, while such bidder's prices were low on one or two unsuccessful bids, his prices on the same unit incorporated in unsuccessful bids show wide variations and higher prices on the same units as those covered by the successful bids."

Kutz Promises Inquiry

Brig. Gen. Charles W. Kutz, District Engineer Commissioner, said he would take up the charges leveled by the comptroller general's office today with Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, who is in charge of all street paving contracts. He promised a thorough investigation of all paving contracts dating back to February, 1937.

"I will reserve an opinion iin this matter until I have heard both sides," he said. "I have no reason to believe that any municipal official is doing anything wrong in connection with the letting of these contracts."

Capt. Whitehurst denied as "untrue" the accusation that contracts for paving are apparently split between four major contractors here.

He said all Federal-aid paving contracts are always approved by the Federal Public Roads Administration and strictly local projects follow the same method of setting up specifications. There are only six local contractors with asphalt plant facilities, he added.

"I have been here 15 years," he declared, "and the procedure in letting contracts has not changed. In fact, there has been no change since the highway department came into existence. Bids are solicited by public advertisements and are opened by the contract board. There never has been a case—save one—where the award has not been made to the lowest bidder."

Low Bidder Disqualified

The single case involved a low bidder who was disqualified, he explained, and the contract went to the next lowest.

The contract board is composed of the chief clerk of the engineering department, a representative of the corporation counsel's office and the District auditor.

Whitehurst said he was asked last fall by the Government Accounting Office to answer 73 questions concerning methods of letting paving contracts. Each question was answered specifically, he said.

"The procedure in this matter was out of order," he continued, "because such a request should have been made to the commissioners. But I went ahead and did it."

In many cases contracts are let for paving work on six or eight streets at a time because to let contracts for each separately would be too costly, he explained. Specifications never make gusrantees of the quality of work and the law permits "overruns" of 25 per cent in case additional items are found necessary, he said.

The Comptroller General's report stated that it was found "over runs in quantities of materials and work produced payments greatly in excess of the total estimates stated in the contracts."

Seven such contracts, which the report said were "taken at random" disclosed percentages of over runs from 1.267 on a $64,990.25 contract to 46.756 on a $41,515.50 contract.

"Manifestly, as to work done and materials furnished pursuant to the action of the District Commissioners in adding to contracts work locations other than and in addition to, those specified in the agreements, there was no true competition," it was said.

There was no bond protection in over runs on payments, the report affirmed.

In conclusion the report stated that "the practices herein reported are not deemed to be to the best interests of the District of Columbia or the United States."

'Aida' Comes to the Watergate And 5000 Find Her Charming

Fortune Gallo presents the San Carlo Opera Company in Verdi's "Aida" at the Potomac Watergate on Wednesday night. The cast:

Aida ..... Mobley Lushanya
Rhadames ..... Harold Lindi
Amneris ..... Anna Kaskas
Amonasro ..... Mostyn Thomas
Ramfis ..... Harold Kravitt
King of Egypt
Richard Wentworth
Conductor: Carlo Peroni

Postponed from a rainy Friday, Verdi's "Aida" was presented last evening at the Potomac Watergate by the San Carlo Opera Company before an audience variously estimated between five and six thousand people. Thanks to the resourceful stage director, Louis Raybaut, who did many wonders besides patching together pieces of scenery in a space too small for theatrical sets, and to the experienced conductor, Carlo Peroni, whose control was as firm as though he had been in an orchestral pit instead of separated from the footlights by the width of a barge, the performance had excellent cohesion and drive. With the earnest cooperation of the company, they accomplished between them the commendable feat of creating under discouraging conditions a more than reasonable facsimile of a most spectacular opera.

BROWN

Usually it is the spectacle which predominates in a production of "Aida" to such a degree that the average auditor, unfamiliar with the details of the score, hears much of the music as a secondary element. On this occasion, with amplification of the orchestra as well as of the voices, no listener could fail to notice that the music is the force from which the visual elements of the drama emanate. It was in the imagination of Verdi, a genius of dramatic ideas, that the music flowered in terms of color, form and movement.

The principals in the cast acquitted themselves in a manner which evoked salvos of applause from the audience. In tthe name part, Mobley Lushanya, the Chickasaw soprano, displayed a clear and agreeable voice which was both plangent in fortissimo and appealingly warm with emotional tenderness in restrained utterance. Her characterization was well worked out in histrionic effects and sympathetic in presentation.

The Amneris, borrowed from the Metropolitan artistic staff, was Anna Kaskas, whose vocal ability was matched by her acting skill in alternating between regal hauteur and the fury of a woman scorned. Harold Lindi, whose tenor voice is not quite of heroic caliber, passed the ordeal of "Celeste Aida" with some wobbling of the high notes, and thereafter sang with more steadiness as well as with romantic fervor. Mostyn Thomas as Amonasro, used a vibrant barytone with consistent intensity, and Harold Kravitt's resonant basso fitted neatly the stern dignity of Ramfis.

From the viewpoint of dramatic construction, it is interesting to note Verdi's preference in all his operas for the barytone and basso voices as exponents of the emotional motivation. Specifically in "Aida" it is Ramfis and Amonasro, who are the focal centers of dramatic action, and Rhadames is the tenor puppet manipulated first by one and then by the other.

Accidental Death Drowning Verdict

A certificate of accidental drowning was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday in the death of Richard E. Coleman, 42, Negro, of 803 Fourth Street Southwest, whose rowboat was capsized by the wash of the S. S. Potomac Tuesday night.

Coleman was fishing in the Washington Channel when the excursion steamer went by him heading downstream. The wash turned over his boat and Coleman was drowned after a futile attempt to swim to shore.

His body was recovered by Harbor Policemen W. A. Link and L. Halstead.

Milk Decision Is Expected by This Weekend

Although they have had many false alarms since July 7, when they began waiting for a milk price decision by the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington producers and distributors yesterday believed action would come by this weekend.

The basis of this expectation is as follows:

There are reports that organized producers will demand a higher price for their milk from Washington dairies if Secretary Wickard's decision is not out by September 1.

To promulgate an order to become effective September 1, Secretary Wickard would almost certainly have to act by Saturday—or Monday at the latest. The reason is that several days must be allowed for producers and distributors to vote on accepting the amended order, as provided by law.

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, recently wrote Wickard that he had information the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association planned to demand a "voluntary" increase from their dairy customers if a higher price were not in effect, by Federal order, on September 1.

The association has withheld comment on the report. Last month it did try to get its clients to agree to a price increase, but without success.

At public hearings held in June, the Secretary of Agriculture was requested to amend the existing Federal milk marketing order by granting a cent-a-quart increase in the price of fluid milk.

To become effective, the amended order—after tentative approval by Secretary Wickard—must be ratified by two-thirds of the producers involved.

In addition, it must be ratified by 50 per cent of the handlers involved—the percentage being based upon volume of business. In lieu of this, the order can be effected only with the signature of the President.

Big Increase In Permit Revocations

86 Per Cent Gain Is Shown in Penalties Imposed on Drivers During Last Year

District police and traffic authorities clamped down on motoring offenses during the last fiscal year—the period showing an 86 per cent increase in permit suspensions and revocations over the previous year.

This was reported to the Commissioners yesterday by Edward R. Deane, secretary of the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators' Permits.

A total of 11,640 cases came before the board during the year, Deane said, and driving privileges of 2222 motorists were either suspended or revoked. Warnings were issued in 1722 instances and in the balance of cases no action was taken.

Work of the police Accident Prevention Unit was included in Deane's report for the first time. The unit, he said, reported approximately 800 cases involving accidents and of this number the board determined that 223 warranted suspension of permits. Suspension periods, Deane said, ranged from 1 days to 6 months, depending on the type of accident and law infraction involved.

In most other instances accident offenders were merely warned, the report said.

In calling attention to a substantial increase in the number of suspensions under reciprocity privileges of nonresidents, Deane commented:

"This may indicate a far greater number of persons using out-of-town tags in the District while employed by the Federal Government on defense projects."

A total of 436 permits of this type were suspended.

"Although the number of suspensions greatly increased over the previous year," Deane told the Commissioners, "it is the belief of the members of the board that the present system of suspending permits is having the desired effect. This can be noticed in the fact that second and third offenses of speeding have greatly decreased during this year."

First offense speeding drew the greatest number of suspensions, with 523. Next was the non-resident privilege and the third highest number of permits suspended—195—was for second offense speeding.

Nats Beat Indians in 9th for Fourth Straight

Bridges Halts Yanks, Allowing Two Hits

Tribe Limited To Eight Hits By Anderson

Washington's 4 Runs In Last Inning Wins, 6-3; Al Smith, Jinx To Griffs, Is Beaten

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, Aug. 20.—Make it four straight for the Nats. They did a mop-up job on the Cleveland Indians today, sweeping the three-game series with a 6-to-3 triumph driven home by four runs in the ninth inning. It was the swooning Indians' eighth straight defeat. Big Arnold Anderson kept the Nats in the ball game until they won it. With Alex Carrasquel and his six-game winning streak confined to the Nats' hotel because of the big Venezuelan's stomach ailment, Manager Bucky Harris turned in desperation to Anderson and the big Swede did almost a complete job of licking the Indians.

Anderson had not been trusted with a starting job since early June, when the Browns knocked him out of the box in his first and only other start of the season, but he was pitching five-hit ball until the Indians got obstreperous with two out in the ninth and put the tying runs on base. Walter Masterson finally got the side out.

The Nats finally caught up with Al Smith, long-time nemesis, who has beaten 'em four times this season. They made only seven hits off Smith but they dug out from behind a 1-0 deficit to tie the score in the sixth, went ahead 2-1 in the seventh, and then put on a four-run crusher in the ninth when Smith lost his control and walked one run across the plate. Cecil Travis fetched two more home with his only hit of the day.

Bloodworth Gets 3 Hits

Jimmy Bloodworth, whose homer beat the Indians yesterday, didn't do the Nats any harm today, either. He made three of Washington's seven hits and again fatted his batting average against the Cleveland pitching of which he is so fond this season. Bloodworth has slugged Cleveland pitching for 23 hits in 58 times at bat this season for an average of .397. He's bad news to the Injuns.

It was a really brilliant pitching battle between Anderson and the left-handed Smith until the Nats came up with those four large runs in the ninth. Smith didn't allow a hit until the fifth inning, and Anderson allowed only two hits until the sixth. Those two hits, however, were first-inning doubles by Weatherly and Heath with two out, and set Cleveland up in a 1-0 lead.

Buddy Lewis finally fetched the Nats a 1-1 tie in the sixth. After Smith walked Cramer to open the inning, Lewis slugged a two-bagger against the right field screen that missed home run qualities only by inches and Cramer galloped home with the tying run.

Bloodworth singled to center to put another run in motion in the seventh, and after Evans struck out, Anderson sacrificed him to second. George Case got him home with a double to center.

Anderson had the help of Doc Cramer and Buddy Lewis in holding the Indians scoreless from the second to the ninth. Cramer made a sensational lunging catch of Peters' long line drive to center in the sixth and nullified two hits that followed. In the seventh, with the tying run on second base and two out, Lewis scurried far against the wall in right center to haul down Smith's long drive.

Archie Strikes

There wasn't much sign of a Washington uprising in the ninth when Archie fanned for the first out, but Bloodworth came along with his third straight hit, a single past Keltner, and the Nats were off. Evans drew a walk and they got their four runs after Anderson popped out. Case walked to fill the bases and Cramer got one run home with a high-hopping single to Peters. Smith forced in the second run by walking Lewis and then Travis singled to right with the bases full to get the third and fourth runs of the inning home.

Chisox Again Blank Macks, 3d in Row

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 20.—The Chicago White Sox's precision pitching carried the second-place Chicagoans to their third straight shutout, one shy of the league record, and their ninth consecutive victory today as Johnny Rigney blanked the Philadelphia Athletics, 9 to 0, on three scattered singles.

The triumph gave the Sox a three-game sweep of the series and 18 victories in their last 21 games.

Only two A's got to third base and only four others to second in the series, which was started with twin shutouts by Thornton Lee and Johnny Humphries. With their three final innings in their previous game Sunday also sans runs, the Sox hurlers now have 30 scoreless innings.

Rigney, who also pitched a three-hit shutout against Detroit Saturday, had the help of a nine-hit attack against Luman Harris, as well as three fumbles by Shortstop Al Brancato, in recording his tenth victory against ten defents. He fanned eight.

Betty's Bob Takes Washington Park $2500 Handicap

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 20.—Betty's Bob, a 4-year-old gelding owned by Mrs. Inez Bryant, of St. Louis, won the $2500 added Lucien Lyne Handicap at 2¼ miles in track record time at Washington Park today.

Made a slight choice over H. G. Bedwell's Regent by the crowd of 12,000, the son of Big Brand finished three and a half lengths ahead of H. & H. Stock Farm's Gen. L. in 3:54 1-5, bettering by a fifth of a second the former mark held jointly by Sidney Grant and Shot Put. Mrs. John Oros' Bucking finished a close third in the field of six.

Copper Tube set most of the pace but gave up after about a mile and a half and Gen. L. took over. Jockey Lee Haskell sent Betty's Bob to the leader rounding the stretch turn, and after a stiff duel Betty's Bob drew out to win nicely. The winner, carrying 114 pounds, paid $6.20, $3.40 and $2.60 and earned $1875.

Frisch Is Fined For Umbrella Act

Brooklyn, Aug. 20 (AP).—Frankie Frisch's vaudeville act of raising an umbrella during the second game of yesterday's rainy double-header with the Dodgers cost the Pittsburgh manager $50.

Frisch received notice of his first fine of the year from President Ford Frick, of the National League, just before today's game between the two clubs.

"Now I am mad," said Frisch as he tore the telegram into some 50 pieces.

Sullivan Suspended For Breaking Training

Brooklyn, Aug. 20 (AP).—Joe Sullivan, left-handed pitcher for the Pittsburgh Pirates, was fined $200, suspended for 30 days and sent home by Manager Frank Frisch today for breaking training.

Sullivan started the first game of yesterday's double-header and was knocked out in the first inning after giving seven runs.

Bogart Draws Good Times in Amateur

City Titlist Leaves Today for Omaha; Greiner Draws Ray Billows as Partner

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Ralph Bogart, the District champion and lone qualifier for the National Amateur championship, will leave this afternoon by train for Omaha, Nebr., where he has drawn a pair of preferred starting times according to pairings released yesterday by the U. S. G. A.

The 21-year-old shotmaker will play at 10:48 on Monday, the first qualifying day, and 1:50 on Tuesday, the second of the 18-hole qualifying rounds. His partners will be Lloyd Ramsey, Lexington, Ky., and Glenn Oatman, Kansas City, Mo., both strangers to golf in this section.

Otto Greiner, the Baltimorean who led the Middle Atlantic qualifiers, will have Ray Billows, the two-time runner-up, as his partner at 8:07 Monday, second threesome off the tee of the Omaha Field Club, and 11:09 Tuesday. Billows, the second alternate from the New York district, will play in place of Bobby Jacobson, Deal, N. J., amateur, who withdrew. Eugene Milbourn, of the host city, will complete the threesome.

Walter Cushman, the Virginia State champion who qualified at the Country Club of Maryland, will have Thomas Pierce, Rutland, Vt., and William J. McPartland, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, as partners at 9:31 Monday and 12:33 Tuesday. Fourth of this section's players, Baltimore's Eddie Johnston, will tee off at 1:22 Monday and 10:20 Tuesday with James French, jr., San Francisco, and Oliver Transue, South Euclid, Ohio.

Brazilian Threat

The most attractive threesome from a national standpoint will be that of Johnny Goodman, the amateur and open champion from the host club; Private Charles Yates, the former British amateur champion, and W. B. McCullough, jr., last year's runner-up.

Dick Chapman, the defending titlist, will play his qualifying rounds with Tom Sheehan and Mario Gonzalez, the Brazilian who may be a real title threat.

Chapman arrived yesterday in time for a few practice shots, accompanied by his wife and his personal pro, Leo Walper, of this city.

Two Ohio Teams Win in Tourney

Wichita, Kans., Aug. 20 (AP).—A pair of Ohio teams triumphed in today's daylight half of the National Semipro Baseball program whose start was delayed four hours by rain.

The Lancaster (Ohio) Glassworkers bumped New Brunswick, N. J., 6 to 2, hammering Leon Revilinsky out of the box in four innings. Harvey Eades' home run with the bases loaded brought the Columbus (Ohio) Reds a 10 to 2 triumph over Kingsport, Tenn.

Mose Brown Stops Webb In 5th Round

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 20.—For the second time within three weeks, Mose Brown, hard-punching McKeesport (Pa.) Negro, tonight stopped Irish (Jimmy) Webb, of Houston, Tex., a leading contender for the lightweight boxing title vacated by Billy Conn.

The referee halted the scheduled ten-round bout in the fifth round, with Webb helpless on the ropes. The Texan weighed 171, a pound more than his conqueror. Webb was knocked out in the second round of their first battle.

For five minutes Webb and his frantic manager, Chris Dundee, argued and pleaded with authorities for a reconsideration of the decision. Referee Red Robinson, however, emphatically ruled Webb, by refusing to get in a fighting position, had to be ruled out. There were no knockdowns, but the contest had been a wild slugging affair, with Webb obviously in serious trouble.

Ernie Derho, 145, of Minneapolis, rallied in the final round of the six-round semifinal bout against Freddy Bey, 149, of Pittsburgh, but lost the judges decision.

12 Players Subject To Draft, Coach Wants Married Men

By the Associated Press

Allentown, Pa., Aug. 20.—Al "Doggie" Julian, Muhlenberg College athletic coach, today sent out a call for "any married men with two children who can play football."

Two of Julian's best players already have been inducted into the Army and nearly a dozen others are subject to call, possibly before the football season gets under way.

"If I can get a couple of married men with dependents on the squad I'll feel pretty good," said Julian, "because I know they won't be called up for Army service."

Grant Stars With Bobbitt In Net Doubles

By the Associated Press

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 20.—Little Bitsy Grant, the mighty Atlanta mite who hogged the tennis headlines quite a few years back, put on one of his old surefire acts at Longwood today to give the National Doubles Tennis Tournament a new record.

Irving Wright, chairman of the National Doubles committee, announced a new high for a national competition that reached back three-score years, as the pint-sized veteran and his home-town partner, Russel Bobbitt, played a total of 102 games before defeating the younger Edwin Amark, of San Francisco, and Robin Hippinstiel, of Los Angeles.

Grant, who always has been rated as the court game's most spectacular retriever, and Bobbitt outfought Amark and Hippinstiel for a heart-breaking first set, at 14—12. Then the mighty little Bitsy suffered the misfortune of turning his ankle during the almost equally exciting 15—17 second set-to.

Painful Ankle

Bitsy flopped in agony during the tenth game of the second set and so much happened before he recovered full possession of his motive powers that the opposition was on even terms.

All that came early in the four-hour match, which wound up with Grant and Bobbitt winning by margins of 14—12, 15—17, 6—4, 4—6, 13—11.

Since Grant and Bobbit were unseeded, they captured today's spotlight with their heroic efforts.

As far as the favorites were concerned, they moved along in smooth fashion.

Defending Champions Jack Kramer and Ted Schroeder had a bit of a struggle getting through such promising youngsters as Arthur Marx, of Beverly Hills, Calif., son of the famous film comedian, Groucho, and "Budge" Patty, the new National Junior titlist, by 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4 margins.

The other three rated teams in the men's division advanced with no upsets but with plenty of excitement.

New York, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—Sam Snead will pair with Paul Runyan against Ben Hogan and Bryon Nelson in a 36-hole exhibition golf match for the benefit of the Untied Service Organization on Labor Day, September 1, at the Metropolis Country Club, White Plains, N. Y., it was announced today.

Full details of the match are being worked out now. It is expected the event will include both "best ball" and "Scotch foursome" matches.

Tigers Win, 1-0, With Run In Tenth

Keller and Sturm Collect Singles; Bonham Touched For Twelve Hits

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 20.—The veteran, Tommy Bridges, outpitched Ernie Bonham in a 10-inning thriller today as the Tigers nosed out the Yankees, 1 to 0, to take the rubber game of the three-game series.

Bridges, hurling one of the finest games of his career, limited the Bombers to two hits and fanned nine. Charlie Keller lined a single into right field in the first inning for the only clean blow off the lean righthander. Johnny Sturm's single in the sixth was of the infield variety.

The Yanks were playing without Joe DiMaggio, who suffered a sprained ankle in yesterday's contest.

The Tigers, though solving Tiny Bonham for a total of 12 blows, were held scoreless until the first extra inning when singles by Tuck Stainback, Rip Radcliff and Barney McCosky broke up the battle. Charlie Gehringer was perched on third when McCosky rang the bell with a clean single to center field.

Rip Radcliff led the Detroit assault on Bonham with three hits, all singles, but they were in vain until Bonham finally weakened in the tenth. In all, 11 Tigers were left stranded. Two Detroit double plays assisted Bridges in scoring his seventh victory.

Ailing Father May Defer Bob Feller

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 20.—The disclosure that Pitcher Bob Feller has been spending about $7000 a year to provide medical treatment and travel for his ailing father led to speculation tonight that the strike-out king might be deferred from Army service.

Noting that the Philadelphia Athletics' Benny McCoy was deferred under a Presidential ruling that selectees should not be forced to use savings to support dependents, the Cleveland News declared Feller "has direct precedent for seeking deferment."

Rapid Robert, who is awaiting classification by his Selective Service Board, had only this comment: "I have never asked for deferment and I won't ask—that is purely in the hands of the draft board."

C. C. Slapnicka, Tribe vice president, cautiously made this brief statement: "If I have a correct interpretation of the McCoy ruling, then Bob Feller's status is more than a borderline case. However, before any action is taken in this matter, we will give it considerable more study."

Father in Ill Health

The News summarized the $45,000-a-year pitcher's situation this way:

Because of poor health, Father William Feller is no longer able to make his Iowa farm a paying proposition. He is urgently in need of medical treatment and year-around sunshine and must spend some time each year at the Mayo Clinic. His physicians insist he must spend the winter in Florida.

Bob's mother has suffered recurrent headaches since she was hit by a foul ball in Chicago two years ago. He also has a young unmarried sister. Bob never has kept a large cash balance on hand, and if the Army took him he would be forced to turn in insurance policies for their present value.

"That's precisely what the latest ruling in the McCoy case says a prospective draftee is not required to do, the News continued, saying that it presented the facts simply because Rapid Robert's "position in the public eye naturally makes it almost impossible for him to take any action."

'Pop' Warner Not To Act as Advisory Coach to Spartans

By the Associated Press

San Jose, Calif., Aug. 20.—Glenn "Pop" Warner advised San Jose State College authorities today he would not act as advisory coach for the Spartan football team this season.

In a letter mailed from Springville, N. Y., Warner said he would spend the fall and winter traveling and loafing.

He gave no other reason for not returning for his third season as advisory coach of the Spartans, who won 23 out of 24 games the two years he was connected with the coaching staff.

Sources at the college, however, said Warner was dissatisfied with an expense allowance which dropped from $3,000 in 1939 to $500 last year. He received no salary.

Ickes Issues Duck Shooting Rules

By the Associated Press

A 60-day duck-hunting season was proclaimed by Secretary of the Interior Ickes yesterday, starting October 1 in the Northern States, October 16 in intermediate States and November 2 in Southern States.

In issuing 1941 regulations for hunting migratory game birds, Ickes left unchanged the 60-day season and the 10-a-day bag limit of last year, retained the prohibition against use of bait or live decoys, but added a clause forbidding the taking of water fowl by using cattle, horses or mules as blinds.

As in recent years, hunters must plug repeating and automatic shotguns to a limit of three shells and must not use guns larger than 10-gauge. Hunting with bows and arrows is still permissible. Shooting hours remain the same, sunrise to 4 p. m.

A drastic reduction was ordered in the shooting season for mourning doves, because, Ickes said, the number of these birds was found to be "decidedly unsatisfactory." Whereas the season in some areas ran as long as 77 days, this year's season was reduced to a maximum of 42 days.

Other major changes from last year included:

1. A closed season on Wilson snipe, commonly known as jacksnipe.

2. A ten-a-day limit on canvasback and ruddy ducks, formerly limited to three a day.

3. Transfer of Ohio to the northern zone and New Mexico to the southern.

4. Legalizing the shooting and possession of one wood duck per hunter in Pennsylvania, Delaware, Kentucky, Missouri, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas.

5. A closed season on snow geese in Idaho to extend additional protection to the rare trumpeter swan.

6. A three-a-day bag limit for geese in heavy concentration areas of certain counties in North Carolina, Illinois and California.

7. An open season for Puerto Rico.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, Aug. 20.—Coincident with the Washington club's battle to achieve something loftier than the cellar in these fading days of the season, another struggle is taking place on the club, Manager Bucky Harris is battling to save his job. Harris is a dead duck if the Nats finish in the cellar. Clark Griffith hasn't said so outright but he has hinted as much. The old gentleman has a pride in the fact that no Washington club since he joined up with the team in 1912, has ever finished in eighth place. Harris wouldn't get any fond embrace from the Nats' owner if the Nats wound up trailing the league this year.

POVICH

Harris is somewhat without honor in Washington, for a fact, at least among the game-going public which has been able to work up no lather at his bench-sitting and infrequent appearances on the field. But around the league in the press boxes on the opposing benches Harris is held in high esteem. Abroad in the league he is rated as one of the better managers and it is with some amazement that they hear the report that he is on thin ice in Washington.

Feels He Is More Useful on Bench

The first reaction is to absolve Harris from any guilt in the lowly fortunes of the Nats; rather it is to marvel at the manner in which he has maneuvered the club into a contending position for fifth place. That he doesn't have much to work with is conceded. Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis are the nub of all that Harris has to offer in the way of outstanding ball players. His rookies come to him from such as Charlotte and Greenville and Springfield, and the green peas at his disposal are enough to make any manager toss in the towel.

Harris could insure his job, perhaps if he chose to get out on the coaching lines, make a few scenes, bait the umpires and act up generally like a rip-snorting character, but he won't go in for that sort of stuff even if it does mean his job. It isn't a case of too much dignity; Harris after all is out of the coal mines and cheerfully admits it. He simply feels that he can do his best job sitting on the bench with his ball players. He has explained that theory several times, saying:

"I've got men who can coach at third or first base as well as I can, and I'm not needed out there. Where I am needed is on the bench. I don't have the kind of ball players I'd like to have, without reflection on them when I say it, this is a dead-fish ball club. Our bench would be like a morgue if I weren't there trying to needle fire into 'em. This is the kind of a club I've got to keep hepped up. Out there on the coaching lines, I wouldn't be much help.

Besides, we got so many kids from the minors that they have to be told a few things, and that's when I try to help 'em; when the ball game is going on. I have to talk to our hitters before they go up there to bat. I try to give 'em a lift. That's where I've got a job to do, on the bench, not on the coaching lines."

Among Team Members, He's Tops

For the Nats it must be noted that they have a deep affection for Harris. In fact, they love the guy. There's a reason for that, too. He's kind to the worst of 'em. Without being caustic he lets them have it pointedly and sends them out to do better. He forgives them easily for their mechanical errors because he knows he cannot expect too much skill, but he overlooks no chance to rebuke their dumb plays. Typical was his handling of George Case the other day in Washington after Case came back to the bench in an inning in which Boston scored two runs.

"I didn't mind you dropping that ball, George," said Harris, "but I'm giving you hell for throwing to third base when you should have thrown to second. Anybody can muff a ball, but there's no excuse for ever throwing to the wrong base. I'm telling you this right now, in the second inning, when we're still ahead. I'm not waiting until after the game is over and we're beaten. You can do better." He made a friend of Case.

They're trying to save Harris' job for him. They swear by the fellow. Steve Sundra, who was knocked out of the box in five straight starts, didn't miss a turn and is grateful to Harris for restarting him. When Sundra finally lasted the route and beat the Indians the other day, his first act was to shake Harris' hand. Dutch Leonard says he never wants to be traded off the Washington club. Sid Hudson, who would have been back in the minors last year after losing his first seven starts were he working for any other manager, wants to pitch for Harris the rest of his life. It's pretty typical about how his ball club feels toward the Nats' manager. They think he's pretty good.

Dear Boss,

Tell the truth, Boss, I haven't heard 73 to 0 mentioned since the Redskins got off the train here. On the way out, the fellows kidded about that beating they took from the Bears and I saw one or two growl when they saw those figures in a newspaper, but all in all that game is now being treated like a bad day at the races.

Now that practice has begun, the Redskins are too busy during the day and too tired at night even to think of what the Bears and that famous "T" formation did to them right in the Washington back yard. In fact, I had almost forgotten it but there are two constant reminders. At the top of the hotel menu there's a 24-cent breakfast that includes bear claw rolls—honest. In addition, California license tags for the San Diego district contain the letter "T." As I write this, there's a parked car across the way with a 29-T-341. Say them over and they sound like Chicago Bear signals.

HAIGHT

Before getting away from that 73 to 0 and the "T" formation, I want to pass along a little something that I whipped up. Try it to the tune of "My Sister and I."

George Marshall and I remember still
How those Bears went through us at will
And the Washington fans they foot the bill,
But we don't talk about that—
We're learning to forget he cares
That came East with those Bears
We're almost happy out West here
But sometimes we wake at night
And cry in our beer—
George Marshall and I recall the day
That the Redskin fans all walked away—
But the poor working press had to stay,
But we don't talk about that.

Well, boss, I'm beginning to believe I will like this assignment, after all. Of course, I have to work under some adverse conditions. Right outside my window that's a patio with palm trees and whatever is the plural of cactus. Off in the distance is the bay, sparkling under the bright sun. I think often of those lucky fellows in the office, under those cool lights. Just think I can't even throw a cigarette butt on the floor. And it tires me out to see a waiter carrying a table into my room with all those silver gadgets on it. Just makes me want to reach for the phone and dial Bassin's for a hot dog with the works.

Perhaps the best thing about this job is the fact that I'm not so conspicuous here as I was around the race track with jockeys and their wives. Whenever I feel a little self-conscious on account of my size, I just move over toward one of those "fatter-than-I-am" boys, Turk Edwards, Dick Meyers or Jim Bryant. If that Bryant don't get a job, I'm going to try to hire him to go around with me. He's got so much blubber on him that Coach Flaherty is going to keep him from swimming in the

Dodgers Win, 7-6; Cards Sweep Twin Bill

Two Errors Help Flock Score in 9th

Bob Elliott Drops Ball With Three On; Johnny Allen Wins In Relief Role

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 20.—This Brooklyn club is not called "Destiny' Dodgers" for nothing. Today destiny descended on Ebbets Field and gave the Dodgers a 7-to-6 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on an error by Bob Elliott with the bases loaded in the ninth inning.

The game itself was one of the wild, disjointed kind that can happen only to the Dodgers. Brooklyn scored four runs in the first inning and Pittsburgh piled right back with six in the third, three of them on a homer by Elliott.

The Dodgers reclaimed a run in their half of the third and Pete Reiser hit his twelfth home run over the right-field scoreboard in the seventh inning to tie the score.

In this fashion the two teams came up to the last of the ninth. With one out, Billy Herman knocked an easy grounder to Second Baseman Frank Gustine, who booted the ball. Reiser was walked and both runners moved up a base on a wild pitch. This forced an intentional pass for Dolph Camilli to load the bases. Joe Medwick flied to short center, and then Harry Lavagetto raised a swerving fly to right. Elliott flicked at his sun glasses, although no sun was shining, ran in and caught the ball, then dropped it as an audible gasp swept through the stands.

Sixth Straight Victory

Thus did the Dodgers win their sixth straight game, four of them from the hapless Pirates, and turn a cold shoulder toward the threatening St. Louis Cardinals.

Brooklyn made seven hits off Rip Sewell to Pittsburgh's six and threatened frequently through the Pirates' five errors. In the first inning Dixie Walker singled, Herman doubled and both scored on a fly by Reiser when Arky Vaughan made a bad relay. Medwick singled, Lavagetto hit a tremendous double, and they both came home as Catcher Al Lopez let the throw from the outfield go through him.

The Dodgers' run in the third came on a fly by Pee Wee Reese with the bases loaded. Brooklyn loaded the bases with the help of an error in the sixth without scoring.

The Pirates knocked Kirby Higbe out in the third. An error and a single put a runner on third and a wild pitch let him in. Two walks loaded the bases and Vaughan singled for a pair of runs and Elliott followed with his homer off Hugh Casey. John Allen, who pitched the last three innings, got credit for the victory.

Philadelphia, Aug. 20.—Johnny Vander Meer and Elmer Riddle turned in masterful pitching performances today to lead the Cincinatti Reds to twin victories over the Phils. Vander Meer pitched a three-hitter to win the first, 2-0, while Riddle, gaining his fourteenth triumph, scattered six hits for a 3-0 win.

In the opener, Vander Meer won his own ball game by driving in a run with a scorching double in the third after Harry Craft had walked, and then scoring himself on Eddie Jost's triple.

Out-of-Town Grid Coaches Visit Post's Football Clinic

The Washington Post football school, in addition to "guest" coach Maurice "Mush" Dubofsky, of Georgetown, yesterday attracted visiting grid mentors from Wyoming and New York as it went through its third session at Eastern High stadium.

On hand to watch the methods of Coaches Sam Fox, Jim O'Leary and Les Ehrlich were Bill Powers, high school coach at Sunrise, Wyoming, and Coach Nanking, of New York City. Numerous spectators also watched the workout, participated in by the same class which has attended each day.

Dubofsky's appearance was easily the highlight of the program. The burly lawyer who starred at Georgetown and has been responsible for the great forward walls of the Hoyas, talked and demonstrated for almost 45 minutes.

Afterwards his comment was—"What a bang I got out of that! I tell you, this Post school is one of the finest things that's ever happened to boys here."

Today's lesson, immediately after the usual calesthenics, will be on the fundamentals of down-field blocking and tackling. Starting time will again be 4 p. m.

Dodgers Sign French, Veteran Southpaw Hurler

By the United Press

New York, Aug. 20.—The Brooklyn Dodgers, without a left-hander since Kemp Wicker was shipped to the minors August 1, today secured the services of Veteran Larry French from the Chicago Cubs for the waiver price.

FRENCH

French, who had won but five and lost 13 for the Cubs this year, reported to the club immediately and donned a Dodger uniform before today's game with Pittsburgh. To make room for French on the squad, Manager Leo Durocher had to send Tom Tatum, young outfielder recently obtained from Nashville, to Montreal. This shift leaves the Dodgers with but four outfielders.

Cubs Pound Four Pitchers To Beat Giants

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 20.—Seeking his eleventh victory, Carl Hubbell instead was charged with his seventh defeat today when the Chicago Cubs raked the offerings by him and three other Giant hurlers for 16 hits and a 9-to-4 victory.

Vallie Eaves held the Giants to eight hits and was the winner, as the Cubs ran up a lead of seven runs before the Giants could dent home plate. Hack and McCullough led the Cub attack with home runs.

Browns Sweep Double-header From Red Sox

St. Louis, Aug. 20 (AP).—Despite two home runs by Ted Williams, the leading hitter in the major leagues, the Boston Red Sox lost a doubleheader to the St. Louis Browns today, 11 to 9, in the first game and 4 to 3 in a 10-inning second game.

Williams smashed out three home runs in yesterday's divided twin bill and now has a total of 28 for the season.

A little bunt decided the second game for the Browns. With one out, Roy Cullenbine walked and Joe Grace sent him to third with a single. JJohnny Berardino, on a squeeze play, tapped a perfect bunt, scoring Cullenbine with the winning run.

The Browns hammered Charley Wagner for three runs in the first inning, the chief blow being Cullenbine's double with the bases loaded, and then were collared until the tenth.

Another Homer for Ted

Williams blasted a homer off Johnny Niggeling with a man on base in the first inning and the Sox added their other tally in the third on doubles by Lou Finney and Pete Fox.

In the opening game the teams got 12 hits apiece and of the collection 13 were for extra bases. They included ten doubles, a triple and home runs by Williams and Harlond Clift.

The Browns slammed Ol' Mose Grove out of the box with five runs in the first inning and added three against Mickey Harris in the second. Clift's homer with a man aboard and doubles by Walt Judnich and Cullenbine made it 11 runs.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 20.—What kind of condition will the World Series ball clubs be in when the time comes for Judge Landis to rest his turkey craw on that rail and order the festivities started? Punk, we suspect.

CONSIDINE

The Yanks have let down to such an extent that most of the time now they aren't half the team they were a month ago. The Dodgers and Cards are inevitably headed for a knock 'em down and drag 'em dizzy stretch drive. The National League winner is destined to be a big, ragged bundle of nerves when the time comes to play in the series. Can McCarthy snap the Yanks out of their lethargy?

If Brooklyn wins the pennant, Leo Durocher will have a real job on his hands to keep the club from swooning into a let-down. For one thing the actual decision may not be reached until the last few days of the pennant race. If so, the Dodgers will then go into the series with their ears still ringing from the cheers and the wining and the dining that will be their lot if they give Brooklyn its first pennant since 1920.

Glory May Be Head-Turning

In other words, there will be such a terrific to-do made over the winning of the pennant, if the Dodgers win it, that psychologically a number of the Dodgers will inevitably feel that their real work is done. And play like that in the series. The Cards will perhaps react similarly if they make the grade, for even a losers' share of the World Series will appeal to that lowly paid crew.

The current in-and-out action of the Yanks is to be expected. The club is the best money team in baseball. It plays when the checks are down. But whether they go 15 or 16 games ahead of the second place team doesn't really matter to the Yankee players. When the Yanks had to be hot—during that period when they were coming up from fifth place to collar the pace-setting Indians—they were blazing. When Joe DiMaggio just had to get another hit, to come closer to or break the old records, Joe got it, even if he had to lean far over the dish and swat a bad pitch.

Now there is no pressure, no reason to get up there with teeth gritted and give it the old college try; no reason to stretch a single into a double, steal a base or take a chance on getting hurt. Getting the Yanks het up again is McCarthy's well-remembered job but it will be a tough job even for the man who knows how to keep great teams great.

Baseball—On the Seamy Side

We ran into a depressing department of baseball the other day. Walking down the crummy section of Fiftieth Street just west of Broadway, we flushed a covey of bearded gents. They were the House of David ball club, Eastern division. They were squatting there waiting for their tired-looking cars to lug them to Chester, Pa., for a night game.

They tell me that the average salary is around $150 a month. They've played more than 200 games this season, and will play 40 more. Sometimes they play three times on Sunday. They have no trainer, and take care of their aches and breaks as best they can. The management pays their food and keep on the road, but not in New York. During the off season they get a shave and look for some other kind of work. While we were talking to them almost every passer-by stood for a moment and stared at them, laughed out loud and went on. None of the bearded players paid any attention to them.

Nats Open 4-Game Series With Tigers

Cleveland, Aug. 20.—The amazing Nats tonight carried their battle for fifth place directly to the lair of the Detroit Tigers who have a three-game grip on the position. The Washington club, after mopping up a three-game series with Cleveland today and stretching its winning streak to four straight, entrained for Detroit late today.

The Nats will take on the Tigers in a four-game series during the next three days, commencing with a doubleheader tomorrow, and Bucky Harris will be presenting his best pitching front. He has Dutch Leonard and Sid Hudson ready for the twin bill. They will face Buck Newsom and Johnny Gorsica.

Their recent successes have elevated the Nats out of the cellar and only a few percentage points separate them from the sixth place Athletics who hold that position by virtue of having won one more game and lost one more than Washington.

The pitching situation of the Nats has taken a sudden turn for the better despite the indisposition of Alex Carrasquel who is being troubled by a stomach disorder and may not be available for a few more days. Arnold Anderson today turned in a brilliant job against the Indians, and yesterday Vernon Kennedy demonstrated that confidence in him may not be misplaced. Pitching the last four innings of an extra-inning game, Kennedy held Cleveland to one hit.

2-Man Team Will Wrestle At Turner's

It will bring together the tandem of Maurice LaChappelle, the French master, and Ace Freeman, Wisconsin boy, against the terrorizing combination of Ernie and Rudy Dusek.

LaChappelle and Freeman have won five in a row from the toughest two-man teams in the East. But the victory that established the lighter, scientific team of LaChappelle and Freeman as tops locally came a few weeks ago when they won from Lou Plummer and Eddie Newman.

Ernie and Rudy never have shown here as a team, though Ernie appeared with brother Emil in a bout they won from Plummer and Newman last winter.

High Hedge, Buddy Root Aboard, Wins Marlboro Opener

8-Year-Old Pays $7.90 In Feature

Last Bet Takes Show Over Heavy Track; Arboreal Surprises In First Sprint

By Clocker Mike

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 20.—The Southern Maryland Agricultural Fair Association today opened its ten-day meeting with one of the best crowds ever seen here. Although the official count was not known, it was believed that at least 7,000 fans were on hand when the horses paraded for the featured Upper Marlboro Purse. This race, contested over the 5½-furlong distance, brought together a high-class field of sprinters, and the winner turned up in R. J. Lindorf's High Hedge. The 8-year-old son of Tall Timber reached the wire a good length and a half in advance of Last Bet. The latter was a length in front of Cartel.

After breaking well under Buddy Root High Hedge raced with Owaller for a quarter-mile, and at that stage the latter called it a day. Root sent the winner out to a two-length lead at one stage, but was all out to turn back the challenge of Last Bet. Cartel would have been a tough horse to beat if he had not gotten in close quarters entering the stretch.

Racing over a track made heavy by yesterday's rain, High Hedge completed the course in the time of 1:09 1-5 and was a luke-warm choice, returning $7.90.

Arboreal Wins

The first race of the day and meeting saw the favorite players take it on the chin as Arboreal, racing in the interest of M. J. Hasney, took command at the go signal and lead throughout the six and one-half furlongs to be responsible for a $29.20 mutual. He lasted to reach the wire a length and one-half before the favored Chief Cherokee. Brainchild, after racing close up throughout, hung on for the show.

The race, which was run over a heavy track in 1.27 4-5 was the second win of the year for Arboreal and it took the best efforts of A. F. Martinez to get her home.

The choices fared just as badly in the second when R. H. Heighe's Stadium came home in front of her seven rivals. The daughter of Theatrical reported a length and one-half ahead of Egypta, the early leader. Dominal, after being badly outrun for a half, came with a rush to be third.

Scaffiti's 391 Wins Tourney

Al Scaffiti's splendid 391 set finished for top money in the Navy Department post-season tournament last night at Penn Recreation. Bob Pollard, with a string of 364, was the runner-up.

Jimmie Cenci, "baby" member of the Del-Ray Cavaliers, will team up with Anne Hiden tonight in a special doubles match at Hap Newman's drives, their opponents being the twosome of Gladys Lynn and El Geib. The match is scheduled for the Del Ray alleys and will get under way at 8 o'clock.

ARBOREAL went to the front at once, was placed to pressure after a half and held on gamely. BRAINCHILD was within striking distance, but did not respond. IDLE NIGHT came from far back to be going well at the end.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STADIUM, $10.60, $5.40, $4.10; EGYPTA, $7.30, $4.80; DOMINAL, $6.40.

STADIUM was always closest to the pace, went around the leader to take command and was drawing away in the final sixteenth. EGYPTA showed in front until challenged by the winner and was all out to save the place. DOMINAL was far back early and closed best of all while racing on the extreme outside. ZAC PAM was within striking distance entering the stretch but faltered.

Daily Double—ARBOREAL and STADIUM Paid $264.80.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:20. Off at 3:20½. Winner, Claude Feltner's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR FLAME, $6.70, $4.30, $3.30; SUNNY DEL, $8.30, $5.40; TOP TRANSIT, $6.00.

FAIR FLAME was forced to lose ground while following the pace, took command when asked and drew clear under punishment. SUNNY DEL challenged entering the stretch, but could not reach the winner. TOP TRANSIT took command going to the first turn, but weakened. SUEGALE raced evenly throughout.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:54. Off at 3:55. Winner, John Bosley, Jr.'s b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH BUD, $7.40, $4.00, $3.00; STAR CHARTER, $6.00, $4.30; BLUE COVERT, $4.40.

HIGH BUD took the lead soon after the break, widened his margin throughout and was the easiest kind of winner. STAR CHARTER was well up from the start, responded to pressure, but could never reach the winner. BLUE COVERT forced the pace of the winner and weakened in the stretch. CLAY HILL caught tired horses. DABS was through early.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30½. Off at 4:31. Winner, R. J. Zindorf's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH HEDGE, $7.90, $5.10, $4.00; LAST BET, $8.10, $4.90; CARTEL, $3.80.

HIGH HEDGE disposed of OWALLER early, was under a good grip while setting the pace and held on well in the stretch run while under intermittent punishment. LAST BET moved closest to the winner after three-eighths, but could not get up. CARTEL began moving on the last turn, was taken up when in tight quarters momentarily entering the stretch and then came well when finding room. BROOKIE BOY closed well and apparently needs more ground.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:06. Winner, Mrs. M. McNey's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TYR, $14.50, $7.60, $5.80; MISS L. P., $11.10, $7.30; TIME SCOUT, $6.10.

TYR moved up gradually in the opening half, challenged NICK entering the backstretch and drew out easily to win well in hand. MISS L. P. moved between horses on the stretch run and was going well at the end. TIME SCOUT raced in close quarters early, came between horses and closed willingly. NICK set a good pace, but quit when headed. WINTER MONEY was kept on the rail in the heavy going. MATCH POINT tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:39½. Off at 5:39½. Winner, C. F. Heinecke's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OFFICIATE, $61.90, $22.40, $9.30; WEST SEA, $7.10, $3.80; ALMAC, $3.10.

OFFICIATE raced close up while on the outside, challenged entering the stretch and gradually wore down WEST SEA. The latter came through on the rail to take the lead, held on gamely, but was tiring at the end. ALMAC closed with good courage after being outrun early. TROSTAR might have done better but for his rider losing his stirrups. SCHLEY BUCK set the pace for a half and quit. JUDGE HASTEN broke down during the running.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:10. Off at 6:10. Winner, E. H. Franklin's b. g. STAND ALONE made his move after a half, went to the front on the final turn, but was hard ridden when PETEE LAD came again. The latter moved between horses to take command while running easily, appeared through when headed, but came again. COUNT ME closed with good speed after lacking early foot. TONIANNA had a rough trip. CHICANNA closed well.

Selections at Marlboro

Dear Al:

Race Secretary Eddie Brennan, who went to New York to confer with Anthony Pelleteri and S. W. La Brot, relative to the reopening of New Orleans, has not been here for the past two days. However, things are in good hands as Brennan's aides are doing an excellent job. Brennan is expected back some time today. Roy C. (Happy) Gordon, who is serving here as outrider, is starting his twenty-first year of action on the Maryland tracks. There were two new boys seen in action yesterday. They were D. Sinclair and J. Weir. Grouchy, a runner which performed during the Cumberland session, was shipped from that point to Charles Town. After looking over the condition book here, Dr. Langdon changed his mind and shipped his charge here. Grouchy is a scheduled starter on today's card. M. Nelson Bond, father of Bowes Bond and a prominent owner, is very ill in a Baltimore hospital. I'm sure you all join with me in hoping for a speedy recovery. Speaking of new riders, Willie Obert was in action again yesterday. R. Haber is another boy who was grounded during the Bel Air meeting and swung back into action here. It seems like every time J. E. Crider changes from Chester Walters to some other rider the horses begin running bad. That stable just runs well for Walters. Tiger Finkelstein was on hand early yesterday and was showing off letters he received from his loves in Cumberland. The best sale of the year was when Mookie wanted to sell me a radio that was missing a serial, dial and one tube. He was disappointed in me for not buying it. General Manager Joseph A. Farrell seems to be the right man to take over a meeting. As soon as Farrell got in at Bowie they started making improvements and betting picked up at once. Here he seems to be following the same trend. Murray Heagerty is assisting on the charts here and is doing a fine job—Clocker Mike.

First race—ROYAL MOWLEE ran a corking race while finishing second to BUSY TIME, and off that effort must be given the call here. TACARO LILLY would be dangerous if able to start. CALAIS has shown speed on occasions.

Second race—MISS NEPTUNE hasn't been showing a lot lately but has been running over her head. She is dropping down here and should be a fair price. ALL GRAY raced well over this course as a 2-year-old. TRIPHAMMER loves the soft going.

Third race—BARRACA was second to Eltonhead the final day at Cumberland and should whip these. ACE OF TRUMPS has been rested since being disqualified at Bel Air. MISS HILDUR will be in front for a spell if able to break in.

Fourth race—ELTONHEAD is far down on the eligible list but looks like any price if started. SCARLET FLAME is much improved and will be close. REMOLEE has always raced well here.

Fifth race—BUTCHER BOY was a beaten favorite last out and should redeem himself here. Martinez will again be in the saddle and there should be no mistakes. PURPORT could be dangerous off Bel Air races. MARANDAN might take it all if able to stay in on turns.

Sixth race—PRINCESS LADY was a winner at Bel Air and has been rested. In my book she is the best bet of the day. ACTRESS will improve off Bel Air races. BLIND BROOK must be figured.

Seventh race—RIVER BROOM has all good races of late and I believe this is the right one. PRAETOR should be partial to the going and finish no worse than second. BROOKE HEROD is next.

Eighth race—QUILL hasn't raced since Hagerstown, but works say he is fit enough to take it all. JUSTA JIMMIE was beaten in track record time at Cumberland. PEPPERY seems to have reached top form.

Best bet—PRINCESS LADY.

Heurich Tops Vet's Bureau, 4-3, as Tourney Play Starts

All Brewer Runs Are On Errors

Naval Air Station Meets Marketers Today; Game Proves Financial Failure

Without the benefit of an earned run, the Heurich Brewers, of The Washington Post-Industrial League, opened the city sandlot baseball championship tournament yesterday with a 4-3 triumph over Veterans Administration nine, of the T.-H. Government League.

The game on the East Ellipse was the first battle in a tourney which will decide Washington's entry in the National Baseball Federation meet in Youngstown, Ohio, next month. Today, at the East Ellipse again, Heurich's two strongest rivals as it seeks to take it third title, Naval Air Station and Center Market, come to grips. Play will start at 4:30.

The Brewers' performance yesterday was only one of two major disappointments. The other was a preference on the part of some 3000 fans for standing up rather than paying a small fee to sit in the stands. Revenue from the latter will be used to send the District of Columbia champion to Youngstown.

Score on Misplays

Their first setback—it takes two for elimination—was suffered by the Veterans, with little credit to the Brewers. They could get only four hits off Lefty Scavatto, while V. A. registered seven off Downes, and all their scoring resulted from misplays. Despite its loss, the Vet-nine, which was touted as one of the weakest in the tourney, put up an excellent scrap.

First big inning for the Brewers was the fourth, at which time they held a 1-to-0 lead. With men on first and second, Scavatto balked, moving them up a base, and then a passed ball and wild pitch in succession scored them.

V. A. came back in the ninth to tie the count. Outfielder Henning singled the first run home, and then with two out and mates on second and third, Teddy Walsh slammed a clean hit to center, scoring both.

A pair of walks, issued Colliere and Hershberger, by Scavatto, launched Heurich's winning rally. Pinch Hitter Miller forced Hershberger for the second out, but then came disaster for the Veterans. Fielding Al Kidwell's grounder, Third Baseman Burch threw poorly to first, where Inglebretson juggled the ball and let it drop. Colliere scored in the meantime.

Blunt's Workouts Impressive During Training for Poland

216-Pound Negro Fighter Drills With Morez At Turner's Arena for Aug. 27 Bout

When Jack Kearns stated he was taking a gamble in accepting the Eddie Blunt bout here for his fighter Bill Poland, he knew whereof he spoke. In two brief training appearances at Turner's Arena, Blunt showed the gentry that he is a tough hombre.

The Negro heavyweight, who weighs 216 pounds and stands six feet, went through a rigorous workout yesterday at the arena and displayed potent punches in both hands.

The conqueror of Buddy Baer and Abe Simon boxed with Ben Morez, 286-pound Ukrainian. Morez is to meet Jabo Kenner on the August 27 card at Griffith Stadium.

Blunt's manager, Abe Kettler, arrived from New York yesterday and was enthusiastic in getting the Poland fight. It seems Blunt has been having a hard time getting fights. Manager Kettler claims no one wants to meet the North Carolina Negro. He was also pleased in the 25-round distance.

It was Blunt who stopped Bob Tow a couple of years ago in the Garden, when the Arlington fighter was going great guns.

Poland also drilled at the arena. The Jewish heavyweight is in top shape now and Kearns has cautioned him to take it lightly as he doesn't want him to be over-trained.

Sessions have been listed the remainder of the week at the arena with most of the fighters already on hand for Promoter Joe Turner's show.

Yesterday, Phil Furr, who meets Al Franklin in a 12-rounder for the District welterweight title, and Buddy Scott, who is scheduled for a ten against Heavyweight Leo Savold, staged workouts. Before Friday all principals will be training here. They include Pat Comiskey, who meets Claudio Villar, South American knockout sensation; Lee Savold and Villlar.

make it a breeze for Anderson in the ninth, but he ran into heavy trouble right away when Heath and Grimes pounded out two-baggers to the right and left field fences, respectively. Anderson buckled down and disposed of Keltner and Bell on easy outs, but Rosenthal batted for Hemsley and singled home the second run. Harris tolerated Anderson when he walked Pinch Hitter Walker, but when he also walked Pinch Hitter Dean, Harris got him out of there. Masterson got the job with the bases full and the tying runs in position to score on a single, and he threw only two pitches to Campbell. On the second, Campbell grounded out to Bloodworth, and the Indians had lost their fifteenth game in their last 16 starts.

according to the Associated Press.

Bud Ward, co-favored with Goodman and Chapman, will play with William Welch and Art Doering while the sentimental favorite, Chick Evans, is paired with Fred Haas and Raymond Brownell.

Kellerman Plays

Karl F. Kellerman, who played at Columbia Country Club for many years, made the tournament by the withdrawal of Gerald Shattuck, of Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Johnny Burke, the former intercollegiate champion from Georgetown, who is now in business in Chicago, will play in a prominent threesome with Johnny Fischer, a former national amateur titlist, and B. Patrick Abbott, Claude Rippy's conqueror in the National Public Links championship of several years ago and also a runner-up in the National Amateur.

Names familiar to District golf fans are scattered through the list. Frank Allan, the former Georgetown Prep captain and three-time finalist in the Chevy Chase Invitation, drew Ellsworth Vines, the tennis great, and Louis Jennings as partners. Benno Janssen, jr., the Charlottesville, Va., youth who, with his brother was runner-up in the Bannockburn Invitation, will compete as will Jack Donohue, the G. U. student who lost to Bogart in the D. C. finals last year.

Baltimore Junior Golfers Defeat District Team, 8-7

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Aug. 20.—Baltimore's junior golf stars handed Washington's inter-city junior lineup another beating in a renewal of the annual series here today at Bonnie View, scoring two points in the last match for an 8—7 victory.

With the scored tied at 6-all and one match to come in, the Manders brothers, Norman and Logan, could account for but one point when they needed two and the victory went to the hosts. Logan won his match over Jack Burns but Norman lost to George Taylor, son of the Rolling Road Club pro and the brothers lost the best ball on the seventeenth hole.

Best individual score of the day was a 74 by Eddie Johnston, the national amateur qualifier who handed Arthur Myers a 3 and 2 beating. Myers, in defeat, had a 78, best round by any of the visiting team. Bill Cassedy and Charles Brantley had a 71 best ball for the visitors.

Joe Barse, captain of the losers, did his part with a 4 and 3 victory over Duncan McRae although he and Billy Griffin lost the best ball point on the last hole.

An odd feature of the match was that Charley Price and Buster Mrstik both won their matches but as partners could do no better than an even break on the best ball point.

Eddie Johnston, Baltimore, defeated Arthur Myers, Washington, 3 and 2; Herbert A. Wagner, jr., Baltimore, defeated Bill Brownrigg, Washington, 5 and 4. Best ball—Baltimore, 2 and 1.

Joe Barse, Washington, defeated Duncan McRae, Baltimore, 4 and 3; Fred Walters, Baltimore, defeated Billy Griffin, Washington, 2 and 1. Best ball—Baltimore, 1 up.

Washington Open Purse May Hit $500

Al Houghton, tournament committee chairman of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A., announced details yesterday for The Washington Open Championship which will be held Thursday, Sept. 4 over the 36-hole route at Indian Spring.

Houghton was anxious to put over the point that the field will be limited to 72 contestants and entries will close Tuesday, September 2, at 6 p. m. Without exception there will be no post entries accepted.

The tournament will be open to both pros and amateurs and the entry fee will be $5 for each. Mel Shorey, Indian Spring professional, will accept entries at the club.

At least $125, and probably double that amount, will be added to the purse by host club members and with the entrance fees the total will likely run between the four and five hundred dollar mark. First prize will be approximately $150.

A stag dinner will follow at which W. R. McCallum, of the Star, Maury Fitzgerald, of the Times-Herald and Merrell Whittlesey, of The Post, will be honored guests. Houghton has invited many prominent golfers and officials, headed by Commissioner Guy Mason.

The Pro-lady tournament, scheduled September 2 at Congressional, will be a pro-three-partner affair. Entries for the women golfers will close August 28 with Mrs. P. W. Rutledge. The entry fee will be $2 for the women golfers, who will receive half handicap allowance.

The fact that Bryant, despite his size, is reported to be considerable football player has given me an idea. Don't laugh, Boss, and don't tell anybody, but I think I will do a little more working out with the squad. In fact, at this morning's workout one of the players missed a pass and the ball came my way. I scooped it up and instinctively charged a couple of steps. I could have sworn Coach Flaherty, who was standing nearby, caught my actions in the corner of his eye. Now I'm not looking for miracles, Boss, but that football is not bad work—four months and eight months off.

If you think about it, phone my wife and ask her to send out my nose guard.

Heating Baby's Bottle, 'Skin Guard Burned

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 20.—Steve Slininski, all-league guard last year, reported to the Redskins training camp today, but he was unfit to begin practice. The former Washington U. lineman has a large and painful burn on his right thigh, caused by a naccident when he was warming a bottle of milk for his baby. He was placed in the care of a local physician and hopes to be ready for action in a few days.

Ed Cifers, rookie end from Tennessee and only casualty of the training to date, is much improved and should be back on the field tomorrow. A strained ligament forced him to the sidelines.

Today's practice was a repetition of that of yesterday. Sammy Baugh, Roy Zimmerman and Frank Filchock filled the air with passes as the ends and backs pulled the ball out of the air. There was a session of punting with Baugh getting off the longest. Line Coach Turk Edwards sent the forwards through a session of blocking. Signal practice and dummy scrimmage marked the closing 45 minutes of the drill.

A check-up today revealed that the three men on the squad nearest an Army call are Ed Justice, Frank Filchock and Bob Hoffman.

Coach Ray Flaherty expressed himself as pleased with the work of Center George Smith, who is attempting a comeback after being away from the club since he helped them win the championship in 1937. Smith has played each season with Coast teams and is bigger and faster than ever.

Misses Dudley, Williams Lose In Golf Play

By International News Service

Chicago, Aug. 20.—All major contenders left in the forty-first annual Women's Western Closed Golf Tournament tonight with the exception of Eleanor Dudley and Ellamae Williams, both of Chicago.

Of chief interest in the quarter-finals tomorrow will be the match between Mrs. Russell Mann, of Omaha, Nebr., and Mrs. Frank Newell, the former Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif.

Mrs. Mann has been the scoring sensation of the tournament, carding five under par for 42 holes thus far, while Mrs. Newell has been taking her matches with little difficulty. She had a 6 and 5 victory today over Peggy Rutledge, also of Long Beach.

Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., twice winner of the championship and last year's runner-up, took Miss Williams out of play with a 1-up victory on the ninteenth hole where Miss Williams was short with her iron to reach the green, 505 yards from the tee.

Mrs. Mann breezed into the quarter finals with a 6 and 5 victory over Jeanne Cline, of Bloomington, Ill.

Rena Nelson, Chicago, over Mrs. Fred Uihlein, Milwaukee, 7 and 6; Georgia Tainter, Fargo, N. Dak., over Mary Wilder, Chicago, 2 and 1; Mrs. J. Calvert Shorb, South Bend, Ind., over Dot Kielty, Minneapolis, Minn., 5 and 3, and Mrs. Lawrence Selz, Chicago, over Ann Casey, Mason City, Iowa, 4 and 2.

Home Building Lags Behind City's Growth

Despite record-breaking activity, Washington home building continues to lag behind population growth. This condition exists, according to a survey, even though 1940 residential building here reached the highest volume and valuation level in 11 years.

There were 185,393 dwelling units in Washington on April 1, 1940, according to the United States Bureau of Census. Of these, 33,744, or 18.2 per cent, were built between January 1, 1931, and March 31, 1940.

In a survey of home building in 310 United States cities, D. E. Ryan, vice president of Investors Syndicate, commented on the Washington situation as follows:

"Washington," said Mr. Ryan, "provided new homes in 1940 for 34,728 people, a rise of 9,916, or 40 per cent, above 1939, when new homes were built for 24,812 persons. Last year new housing was provided for 26,880 more persons (345 per cent) than the 7,848 total in 1930.

Population Gain Cited

"Population in Washington, according to the 1940 census, rose from 486,869 in 1930 to 663,091 in 1940, a gain of 176,222, or 36.2 per cent. From 1931 to 1940, inclusive, homes put up in Washington furnished housing for 163,840 people, or enough to care for only 93 per cent of the population increase in that period.

Our company's housing survey of 310 cities, containing about 38 per cent of the Nation's population, shows last year's home building in Washington ranked fourth in a list of the 50 largest American cities.

"Washington ranked fourth in the list of 50 American cities in number of homes built in the years 1931 to 1940, inclusive. The gain in new housing accommodations last year over 1939 ranked third in the big-city list. The advance in new shelter in 1940 over that of 1930 ranked second in the 50-city group."

The Investors Syndicate survey shows that new homes put up in Washington in 1940 represented 21 per cent of the ten-year total. Volume peak of 34,728 came in 1940, while the low was in 1933, when only 2,320 persons were furnished with new homes.

Sharp Rise in 1940

"Residences erected in Washington last year were valued at $30,598,565, a gain of $4,623,735, or 17.8 per cent, above the 1939 level of $25,974,830. New home expenditures in 1940 were $16,711,565, or 120.3 per cent higher than the 1930 total of $13,887,000. From 1931 to 1940, inclusive, such valuations aggregated $169,979,847.

"The 1940 new home valuations ranked fourth in the 50-city group; their position for the 1931-1940 period was also fourth.

"The rise in new home values last year over 1939 ranked fifth in the 50-city classification. When 1940 valuations are compared with those of 1930 the advance ranks fourth in the 50-city group.

"Last year's valuations constituted 18 per cent of the new home values created in the 1931-1940 period. Peak of new home valuations, $30,598,565, was created in 1940, while the low, $3,354,600, was hit in 1933."

$150 to $200 Boost in Retail Auto Prices Foreseen in Authoritative Trade Circles

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, Aug. 20.—A shortage of new cars, a rationing of those available to dealers and an increase in retail prices of from $150 to $200 in the average car bracket are certainties, according to authoritative trade sources attempting to appraise the most uncertain future the automobile industry ever has faced.

Possibilities, a little remote at the moment, say these same sources, include a rationing of vehicles to users with priority to individuals engaged in occupations essential to the public wellbeing. Consideration also has been given, persons close to the industry have been told, to the possible future need for a priorities plan for servicing of used cars.

Under this plan a car owned and used by a physician, for example, would be serviced with replacement parts ahead of the vehicle of less urgent necessity.

Out of a meeting in Washington tomorow of the Automotive Industry Defense Advisory Committee the motorcar producers expect to come announcement of schedules for passenger car production for the initial three months of the industry's new model year. Conjecture among the car makers places the figure at not higher than 200,000 units a month, with a tapering off indicated commencing in November.

Because the industry needs what it calls "a planning period" in which to set up tentative production schedules, some of the car makers believe a policy of fixing output programs two or three months in advance throughout the model year may be decided upon by the Automotive Industry Committee, cooperating with the governmental defense agencies.

The industry also expects to come out of tomorrow's conferences in Washington the fixing of "deadlines" for effecting decisions already reached. Among these will be the curtailment or elimination of all so-called "brightwork" for passenger cars, both in interior and exterior trim, and all of things considered decorative and not entirely functional or necessary.

As the industry leaders here anticipate action in this respect they will be asked to state their inventory position on "brightwork" as soon as car production quotas are determined. When their current supplies of this material runs out no more will be available. An arbitrary deadline sometime between December 1 and January 1 is expected to be fixed.

A couple of car manufacturers with alumnium pistons still on hand are using them in the initial production of 1942 models. The Office of Production Management is expected to announce a date for the complete elimination of aluminum piston installation for civilian use.

The industry currently is operating at levels that should produce 200,000 vehicles this month. That volume will include a large number of trucks for the Army and for allied defense purposes. While the figure is considerably below the average that was maintained through the 1941 model period it is more than double the volume of August last year.

Trade sources are agreed that it probably will not be exceeded in any future month through the coming year.

Year's Building Likely to Pass 10 Billion Mark

A large volume of private residential construction, together with the vast building program of the defense effort, will push total expenditures on new construction in 1941 above $10,000,000,000, the Department of Commerce estimated yesterday. This will be almost 50 per cent higher than the 1940 figure, and when compared with the previous annual estimates made regularly by the department, the largest total expenditures since 1929.

The volume of construction during the first half of 1941 has already shown a substantial rise over the previous year. The contracts outstanding on private work and the amounpt of defense construction now scheduled indicate that activity during the second six months will exceed that of the first half. Furthermore, since future defense needs will probably take up most of the slack occasioned by completion of projects already under way, this high level may continue well into next year.

It seems apparent that possibly before the end of 1941, and certainly in 1942, shortages of construction materials, particularly metals and metal products, will become a serious problem. The institution of priorities because of these shortages will tend to concentrate construction activity in fields essential to defense, including defense housing.

Defense Needs Big Factor

Defense needs have contributed heavily to the large expansion in construction activity in 1941 to date. Governmental expenditures alone, directly related to defense, will be more than $3,000,000,000 in 1941, as compared with less than $800,000,000 in 1940. The increase over 1940 accounts for 75 per cent of the increase in all new construction activity. In part, the advance in privately financed construction must also be attributed to the defense effort.

Details of government defense outlays, as well as of other public and private construction expenditures, show all of the major types of construction are having a part in the 1941 expansion. The most striking advances are in military and naval construction and industrial facilities. Public utility and residential building are also showing large gains.

Direct military and naval expenditures within the United States, excluding industrial facilities and defense family dwellings, will be about $1,700,000,000 this year. This approaches the peak twelve-month activity of the first World War. About half of the $1,700,000,000 is for cantonments.

Expenditures on new industrial plants will reach $1,500,000,000 almost two and one-half times the 1940 volume and an all time high. Approximately two-thirds of these expenditures are being financed by the Federal Government. The new facilities in large part are for the direct produtcion of armaments.

Public Utilities Up 40 Per Cent

Public utility construction will be more than 40 per cent ahead of 1940, chiefly because of large additions to electric power and oil pipeline facilities. The high level of industrial activity and the many new defense plants require increased electric power capacity. The expansion of the aluminum industry is a notable example of these new requirements. An extensive oil pipeline expansion program is underway to avert serious shortages along the Eastern seaboard as the result of the transfer of tankers to Great Britain.

Nonfarm residential construction will total about $2,900,000,000 in 1941. This is one-fourth again as much as 1940, but, in spite of defense requirements, still below the level of the middle '20's. The better part of the 1941 rise is in public housing. Residential construction for private ownership is expected to be up about 15 per cent.

About 20 per cent of the $2,900,000,000 is Government owned construction intended mostly to house defense workers. A large part of the rest is also being built to meet shortages caused by migration of workers to defense areas.

Steel Shares Lead Quiet Stock Recovery; Gains Range From Fractions to One Point

New York, Aug. 20.—The stock market today put aside war tensions to enjoy a quiet rally which benefited many leaders to the extent of fractions to around a point.

As in recent recovery efforts, the buying largely was attributed to technical considerations, although inflation ideas were warmed again by a fresh burst of buying in leading commodities.

There were some optimistic touches in the domestic business news but the international picture remained an obstacle to extensive commitments in the share division.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite closed .2 of a point higher at 43.2. Transfers totaled 486,580 shares compared with 390,340 yesterday.

A good performance by the steels helped to steer the general list toward improvement after much indecision in the early dealings. Speculative quarters seemed to favor leaders in the hard metal group on the theory they were entitled to a comeback after their substantial declines since late July.

Rails, aircrafts, rubbers, motors, specialties and the amusement shares were well represented in the plus column, although some failed to retain their full gains at the close.

Finishing ahead were Bethlehem Steel, Republic, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Case, Douglas, Consolidated Aircraft, Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, Southern Railway, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical and Eastman.

Higher in the Curb were Bell Aircraft, Niagara Hudson Power and Gulf Oil. Turnover here was about 101,000 shares against 68,000 Tuesday.

The general corporate bond market again held to a narrow range with small gains and losses about evenly divided but a few medium-priced rails advanced up to 2 points.

Trading activity reflected the usual summer dullness with transfers at $4,936,700, par value, compared with $4,827,800 on Tuesday. Except for a gain of .1 of a point in the rails, all groups in the Associated Press averages held stationary.

South American loans, including Sao Paulo stamped 7s and Argentine 4½s, were higher but irregularity ruled elsewhere in the foreign department. Some British empire issues were under pressure.

Only four Government issues sold on the stock exchange for a total sales turnover of $13,000. Prices were mostly a little lower. A similar trend prevailed over the counter, although there was more activity in that market.

English Send Antiques Here To Get Credits

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 20.—Rare English antiques make up a sizable part of the flood of goods Britain is sending to this country in an effort to build up credits of American dollars, customs brokers and art dealers reported today.

Heirloom furniture, silver, china and tapestries from English town mansions and country estates are being sold to Americans by their English owners, who would rather part with the goods than see them destroyed by bombs, the dealers said.

These sources said the antiques were of types of which usually become available only when a great estate is being broken up. Because of the increasing export of such goods, it was reported, some English firms are preparing to move their offices to the United States.

In addition to the antiques, England is shipping increased quantities of woolen and cotton goods, leather articles, chinaware and Scotch whiskies.

By selling material to the United States, England obtains dollar exchange, which, in turn, can be used to purchase war materials and foodstuffs needed at home.

The ordinary English exports at this season—holiday goods, such as plum puddings, cookies and fruit cakes—are lacking, importers said. They expressed the opinion that civilian requirements took all Britain's fruits, sugar and flour, making export of such food delicacies undesirable from a British standpoint.

Wheat, Cotton Lead Upsurge In Key Staples

By the Associated Press

Wheat and cotton futures surged higher yesterday on a wave of general buying which lifted values of most staples.

Cotton closed $1.80 to $1.85 a bale higher in New York.

At Chicago, wheat was 1⅛ to 1¼ cents a bushel above the previous close and corn addde ⅛ to ⅜ cent a bushel. Other grains followed suit.

Reports of increased foreign demand for world sugar lengthened that product's gains by .03⅛ to .07 of a cent a pound.

Wool tops futures advanced to .4 to 1.2 cents a pound on reports of better business in the Boston market.

Santos coffee futures, with quota uncertainties still worrying traders, was the only major commodity to lose ground, slipping about 1-20 of a cent a pound.

Native spring lambs in the Chicago livestock market were offered at prices ranging 15 to 25 cents a hundred pounds higher. Hogs were steady to 10 cents a hundredweight higher. Weighty long fed steers, however, declined 15 to 25 cents from previous levels.

Sylvania Is Upheld In Cellophane Case

Richmond, Va., Aug. 20 (AP).—Only an appeal by the duPont Co. to the Supreme Court now can prevent the manufacture and sale of cellophane by the Sylvania Industrial Corporation under a ruling received today by District Judge Robert N. Pollard from the U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

The circuit court upheld a decision by Judge Pollard that E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co.'s charges of infringement and unfair trade competition against the Virginia concern with headquarters at Fredericksburg already had been adjudicated by the Second U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in a suit originating in Philadelphia.

Canada Exports In Month Soar To 169 Million

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 20 (AP).—Canada's domestic exports were valued at $169,685,000 in July compared with $100,782,000 in July, 1940, the Dominion bureau of statistics reported today.

The latest figure was the highest since December, 1925, when exports totaled $175,555,228.

The seven-month total for this year was $882,051,000, exceeding total exports in the first seven months of 1940 by $233,130,000.

July domestic exports to the United Kingdom advanced to $70,218,000 from $41,654,000 in July last year, while total for the first seven months this year increased to $387,726,000 from $289,625,000.

Exports to the United States also were higher in July at $56,389,000 compared with $41,684,000 in July, 1940, while total for the seven-month period rose to $311,806,000 from $233,534,000 in the same period last year.

Tax Note Sales Top 379-Million Level

The Treasury Department reports receipts from the sale of tax anticipation notes totaled $379,749,325 in the first 16 days after they were placed on sale August 1.

Officials said actual sales were higher, since most of the notes are sold through Federal Reserve Banks, and are reflected in Treasury receipts figures a few days later.

A. T. & T. Votes Usual Dividend of $2.25

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Directors of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share on the capital stock, payable October 15, to stock of record September 15.

The dividend involves the distribution to around 631,000 stockholders a total of more than $42,000,000.

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—The Canadian dollar gained ¼ of a United States cent in foreign exchange trading today, reaching a 1941 high of 89.25 cents. The Shanghai dollar was off slightly. Other major currencies were unchanged.

Sugar Futures

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—A general buying movement based on persistent foreign demand boosted world sugar futures 3½ to 7 points today on sales of 43,850 tons. At one time prices touched levels 12 points above Tuesday's close.

Inquiries for raw and refined sugar were reported to total between 40,000 and 50,000 tons and asking prices were reported raised to 4.96c equivalent of 1.93 cents a pound for Cuba. Closing New York spot quotations were 1.85 cents for the world contract, up 10 points.

World sugar futures closed September 1.86½ nominally, December 1.91½ bid, March 1.91½ bid, May 1.93¼ bid, July 1.94 bid.

Domestic raw and refined markets were idle during the day. After the close a price administration official was quoted as saying in Washington that the present sugar ceiling of 3.50 cents a pound might be increased if ocean freight rates went up. The report said, however, there was little possibility for an immediate increase in the maximum permitted or its elimination.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Stiffening opposition in Congress to ceilings on farm products was a factor behind the cotton market today as prices ran up $1.80 to $1.85 a bale.

Confidence that President Roosevelt would limit the cotton loan stocks freezing bill was expressed in some circles.

Buying became general by midday, the orders coming from both trade and speculative sources. Selling was confined to hedging by spot houses and to profit-taking.

While general weather news was favorable to cotton overnight rains in the Eastern half of the crop belt were interpreted as damaging.

Worth Street gray goods sales were limited, although some traders reported an increase in demand for standard cloth constructions for delivery in 30 to 60 days.

Priorities Upset Natural Sequence In Steel Plants

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—The magazine Iron Age predicted today that most nondefense orders for steel would not be filled in the near future because of the Government's steel priority order.

"The mills," said the magazine, "are awaiting official word that they can use their own experience and discretion where necessary in determining the proper sequence of steel orders so that rolling mill schedules will not be upset and production actually lost.

"Steel mills which roll on certain sizes and types of steel for long periods before switching to another size or type are concerned with the likelihood of increasing costs as well as slower production. Large consumer industry groups, such as canners, railroads, the oil industry and jobbers are growing still more apprehensive over their ability to obtain the necessary steel. . . . Relief may not come until next year."

Iron Ore Consumption Sets Record in July

Cleveland, Aug. 20 (AP).—Under presure of mounting defense demands the steel industry consumed 6,497,442 gross tons of Lake Superior iron ore during July, a new record, the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association reported today.

This exceeded by 85,911 tons the previous peak of 6,411,531 tons set in March this year and compares with 6,231,067 tons this June and 5,523,595 tons in July, 1941.

Consumption for the first seven months this year rose to the unprecedented high mark of 43,178,525 tons against 32,856,261 tons for the similar period last year.

Group Seeks to Halt Merger of Glass Firms

Pittsburgh, Aug. 20 (AP).—A group of stockholders of the American Window Glass Co. have asked the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court for an injunction to prevent the company's proposed merger with the American Photo Glass & Export Co., a subsidiary.

Sophie D. Cohen and several other individuals owning 3210 shares of the company's Class A stock claimed in their petition the merger was unfair and unjust to Class A stockholders.

Food for Britain Bought

The Agriculture Department yesterday announced the purchase of 1,329,000 pounds of American cheese, 5580 cases of eggs, and 2,104,000 pounds of dried pears. It was assumed that the purchases were made for Britain.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP).—Buyers returned to the grain pits in greater force today to bid wheat prices up almost 2 cents to within less than a cent of the four-year peaks reached last week. Corn showed gains of almost a cent, oats and rye more than a cent and soybeans 3 cents.

Brokers attributed most of the strength of grains to limited offers except at higher prices, covering of previous short sales and some buying of wheat credited to mills. Strength of soybeans, lard, cotton and some other commodities caused sympathetic buying of cereals, they said. Some expressed belief the President's comments about the war situation stimulated market activity.

Wheat closed 1⅛@1⅜ cents higher than yesterday: September, 1.13⅛@1.13⅛; December, 1.16⅜@1.16¾; corn, ½@⅞ up; September, 77⅜; December, 81⅞@82⅛; oats, 1@1½ higher; rye, 1@1½ up; soybeans, 2½@3 higher; lard, 20@23 higher.

Many traders still were awaiting Presidential action on the bill to freeze more than 170,000,000 bushels of 1940 wheat for duration of the war. There were rumors that even if this bill is vetoed producers would be assured that this grain would not be offered for sale below parity prices. No. 2 red wheat sold at 81.11⅛ in the spot market, or less than 2 cents under September delivery compared with a discount of as much as 4 cents recently. The loan rate is $1.13.

and I am waiting for my suit to come back from the cleaners, Jason. Don't tell Grandma I wrote a letter to you in my underwear. Yours truly, Odd Bodkins

He's invited 1,800 soldiers from Fort Belvoir to attend the intimate little soiree being given by Glenn Miller and his orchestra at Riverside Stadium during the Nation-wide broadcast over WJSV and the Columbia network.

Belvoir officers have it figured out that it will take just 200 light trucks to transport the boys from the camp to the stadium. That means, according to their estimate, a parade of trucks just about 6 miles long. It also means that the first contingent of soldiers will be unloaded at the stadium just about the same time the last truckload is leaving the camp.

The little matter of Washington traffic and the slight obstacle it might present is being taken care of by Washington police, who will meet the caravan as soon as it crosses the District lins and provide an escort service.

And then the whole thing has to be done all over again, in reverse, as the boys go back to camp.

The Glenn Miller broadcasts, incidentally, are originating in Washington, at the Riverside Stadium, August 19, 20 and 21 and August 26, 27 and 28.

Gas Earnings Dip, No Rate Cut This Year, Utility Says

District natural gas consumers will not receive their customary reduction in rates this year, the Washington Gas Light Co. reported to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

At a public hearing in the District Building, the company explained it earned only 6 per cent on its investment during the past fiscal year.

Gas users are entitled to rate reductions when the company realizes 6½ per cent. One-half of all surplus above this earning is returned to the consumers under law.

Extra expenditures due to an increased population here and an unusually mild winter combined to keep gas company earnings down, it was reported to the P. U. C.

Actual profits on the company's original investment was estimated at 6.0109 per cent.

Veto Power Of Governor Under Fire

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 20.—Methods of correcting the absolute veto power over legislation held by Maryland's Governors were outlined to the legislative council today by Dr. Horace Flack, council secretary and director of the bureau of legislative references.

Under the State constitution, measures passed by the General Assembly and dated by its clerks must be acted upon by the Governor within six days. It has been the practice of the clerks under the last four State administrations to send the chief executive bills without dating them, Flack said.

Thus the Governor can wait as long as he wants to act on them. If he vetoes a measure after the Legislature adjourns sine die, legislators have no chance to override his veto.

The Legislature, Flack explained, could pass a law directing the clerks to date measures as soon as they are passed and also could adopt a constitutional amendment changing the time allowed the Governor to act on legislation.

The council's research division, which is studying other methods of presenting bills to their chief executives, is to make a detailed report on the subject later.

The council pledged itself to strive for an even better work record and urged all State department heads and the general public to present legislative programs to it in advance of the General Assembly's next session.

Senator Frank Flynn (Democrat), of Baltimore, said some State department heads told the council at meetings last fall they did not have any legislative programs in mind and later presented programs directly to the Assembly.

Senator Wilmer Fell Davis (Republican), of Caroline, said, "I think we ought to call all State department heads down here so that they don't bring pressure groups to the Legislature."

Delegate Milton Tolle (Democrat), of Baltimore County, urged the council to consider the lack of space in some county schools for children of defense workers new in communities.

100 Soldiers Will Be Dined At Greenbelt

One hundred Fort Meade soldiers will be entertained at Sunday dinner this week by residents of Greenbelt, Md., Abraham Chasanow, president of the Greenbelt Citizens Association, said yesterday. Afterwards there will be a baseball game, swimming in the Greenbelt pool, movies and a picnic supper.

Fifty-six Greenbelt families arranged to have one to three soldiers in for dinner, and 65 other families contributed money to help with a day-long entertainment program, Chasanow said. The soldiers will arrive at Greenbelt in seven trucks about 9:30 a. m. Sunday.

Selective Service Favors Plan to Treat Rejected Men With Remediable Defects

Men deferred from Army training under Selective Service because of minor physical defects which are remediable may soon be donning the khaki, according to plans approved yesterday by national draft headquarters.

The move was in cooperation with a recommended Government financed voluntary physical rehabilitation program announced last week by the commission on physical rehabilitation. Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt said at that time steps were being taken to obtain necessary legislation for the program.

The report was prepared following findings of a high rate of rejections of registrants for remediable physical defects. In a speech last May Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, termed the physical status of American youth as revealed by draft tests to be "shameful."

To Get Opportunity

Commenting yesterday, Gen. Hershey declared "if proper measures are taken, every registrant who has remediable defects will be given opportunity for treatment so that he can qualify for military training at a time when his Nation and his neighbors need his services."

The report of the Commission of Physical Rehabilitation recommended men classified as I-B (fit for limited military service) and IV-F (physically unfit) be designated as I-B-R and IV-F-R if the examining physician believes the defect remediable.

Washington had 4029 men classified as I-B and 6000 men classified as IV-F on July 1, a spokesman for local draft headquarters said.

Must State If Willing

The rehabilitation plan calls for the registrant to state whether he is willing to undergo corrective procedures. Also his permission for release of information pertinent thereto and whether or not he will pay for treatment must be ascertained.

Men placed in Class I-B-R or IV-F-R would be advised by their local boards where the defect might be corrected, it was said. If he consented to treatment, the local board would set a time limit after which the registrant would be called before the board for reexamination and reclassification.

Within a few days arrangements for giving data concerning such registrants to authorized agencies will be completed by national headquarters, it was said.

London, Aug. 20.—W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada, arrived in Britain today by bomber, the third dominion premier to fly to England this year. He will arrive in London tomorrow.

Like his predecessors, R. G. Menzies, of Australia, and Peter Frazer, of New Zealand, who is still here, Mackenzie King will discuss war problems with ranking government officials and will attend sessions of the war cabinet.

The flight was the first taken by a Canadian Prime Minister across the Atlantic and, incidentally, Mackenzie King's first air trip.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.
